New Friend, Bacteriophage. Only 6 Literary Books. Idleness Is Real. He Shot, She Believed.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE WORD "bacteriophage," that means little now to human beings, may some day mean more than any other word in the language. Discovered by Dr. Felix D'Herelle, who teaches bacteriology at Yale, the bacteriophage substance has the faculty of destroying bacteria throughout the body. The word means "germ eater."

IN TREATING Asiatic cholera with bacteriophage, Dr. D'Herelle lost eight per cent of patients. Of those lacking bacteriophage treatment more than 62 per cent died. Dysentery, which kills millions in hot countries, is made harmless by bacteriophage. The new substance is complicated, not thoroughly understood. It develops naturally in the human body as disease dies out and completes the cure. It is probably the most important discovery of many years.

HUGH WALPOLE finds only six books "worthy to be called literature." Tolstoy's "War and Peace," Homer's "Iliad," Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," Keats' first volume of poems, Doughty's "Arabia Deserted," and Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

He leaves out Shakespeare. Although Hamlet, King Lear, Macbeth, or The Tempest is worth more than Walpole's whole list.

A PRAYER to the Virgin, written by Villon for his mother, has but few lines and is worth more "as literature" than all that Tolstoy, Jane Austen and Doughty ever wrote. These nonsense lists, however, are valuable, turning men's minds toward books.

CALVIN COOLIDGE radios his fellow citizens that prosperity can't be guaranteed. But you can deserve it. In his daily piece," he seems to think the people may have been spoiled by too many toys.

"Our people own a large supply of cotton, copper, wheat, petroleum and other raw materials. They have heavy deposits of money in the bank and many billions invested in foreign countries. Their automobiles number twenty-five millions, and so, they are feeling very poor."

THE BRITISH Labor government says 12,000,000 are idle here. Our government indignantly denies it, but our government lacks exact information. Government agencies suppress as nearly as possible such information as the government is supposed to want.

THERE ARE many millions idle, and in some trades almost everybody. For instances, 90 per cent of tile layers. The busiest engineer engaged in clearing large tracts of land, discussing a contract with this writer, said:

"I had 800 thoroughly trained men in my organization, steady work, good pay. Now I have fewer than 60. Some of my best men tried unsuccessfully to get a $20 a week job running an elevator by offering $15 cash for the job."

Men wait in line day after day for a chance to do heavy work at 30 cents an hour. Those are the men interested in depression. The prosperous, to whom unemployment is part of an economic theory, do not understand their problem. But Mr. Coolidge understands it.

RALPH FERRARA, 20 years old, told Rose Provengano, 19, that he loved her desperately. She did not believe him. But when he shot her in the shoulder and shot himself in the head she was convinced, and asked Magistrate Murphy to let him put of prison, that she might marry him next week and nurse him. Meanwhile she would sign no complaint. Both will appear at the altar bandaged.

Not so long ago no young girl would believe a man loved her unless he came secretly, knocked her down, and dragged her away by the hair. Courtship has become effete.

JEWISH PROTEST against British Labor government's attitude in Palestine continues intense.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who expresses indignation by resigning as head of the Zionists, is a man well fitted to lead an explosive protest. He invented T. N. T., which blew up almost everything and everybody in the . The British government is accused of "medieval race prejudice."

MORE SERIOUS is the expression of that race prejudice in Budapest. Students at the university organize themselves in groups of 15 to attack and beat individual Jewish students, a safe but not very courageous pastime.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION in Greece. Forty military officers arrested. In Greece, Brazil, Spain, the Argentine, when you read of revolution, military officers are involved.

The American and British system of keeping civilians at the head of Army and Navy represents common sense.

Soldiers and naval officers, cut off from the run of life, are apt to believe they should manage because they don't understand.

POLICE RAID RED RALLY; ARREST 6

Woman Held as Communists Try to Hold Meeting at City-County Building

Outnumbered six to one, ringleaders in Pittsburgh's Communistic unemployed demonstration were defeated today when they attempted to hold a meeting on the Grant street steps of the City-County Building.

Police arrested six participants, including one woman.

Police—mounted and afoot, as well as motorcycle patrolmen and city detectives—swooped down on the central group, led by a young Communist, who rose to his feet to speak at the opening signal at noon.

He began an apparently prepared speech:

"Fellow workers, we are meeting—"

ROUGHED BY POLICE

That was as far as he got. One of the bluecoats stationed nearby gave him a shove to the sidewalk in front of the building.

Police closed in from all around. Mounted patrolmen rode their horses over the sidewalk and officers afoot began grabbing every objector in sight.

They rushed them pell-mell through the City-County Building to the Ross street end, where they were held in the Traffic Bureau until the arrival of patrol wagons, which took them to Central Police Station.

Those arrested included:

ENGINEER DIES IN B. & O. CRASH

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The engineer was killed and the fireman scalded seriously when the No. 17 westbound express of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was wrecked about 4:30 a. m. today near Kearneysville.

The engineer was Stanley [illegible], of Baltimore. Charles Punphrey, also of Baltimore, the fireman, was scalded so severely it was believed he would die. He was brought to a hospital here.

The train, consisting of the locomotive, eight express cars and one passenger car for the use of the train crew, was running as the second section of the westbound express from Washington to Pittsburgh and points West.

World's Woes Slight To Japanese Prince

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Unemployment, earthquakes, war and peace do not excite Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, head of the Japanese house of peers, who is in New York today en route to Washington, where he will call on President Hoover. He will also visit his son, minister at Ottawa, Canada.

Earthquakes, unemployment and such always have been; the Japanese prince said in an interview and his comment on world events was in each case: "That's nothing."

GAS OVERCOMES 2 IN NEW HOME

Two police crews, one from East End station and another from Hazelwood station, rushed to the home of Barney Lipka, 3945 Beechwood boulevard, this morning with inhalators to revive Mrs. Zelia Lipka, 35, and her daughter, Sylvia, reported overcome by gas.

It was the family's first night in the house. Inspectors for a gas company supplying the house with gas also were summoned, but could not find a gas leak. Mrs. Lipka and her daughter had gone to the kitchen to make coffee. Later they were found overcome by Mr. Lipka, manager of the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

Dr. M. S. Goldman, of 5805 Beacon street, also was summoned, and with the aid of the police crews, soon revived Mrs. Lipka and her daughter.

Dr. Goldman pronounced them out of danger. A canary bird in the dining room of the home was not affected.

G. O. P. HOLDS HUGE RALLY

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Republican county chairman, expects an overflow audience at the final rally of the local campaign for state offices at 1:30 p. m. today in North Side Carnegie Music Hall, according to William H. Ziefel, secretary of the committee.

Armstrong has invited Mayor Charles H. Kline and members of the Mayor's cabinet, elected officials of Allegheny County and nominees from the county for Congress, the state Senate and the state House of Representatives.

Judging from the activities of Mayor Kline and Armstrong, the meeting will give unanimous indorsement to Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, and the entire ticket. The two leaders of the city and county have called in the workers of the wards and legislative districts and made an urgent plea for the ticket "from top to bottom," according to reliable reports.

Tech Clashes With N. Y. U. Eleven

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

It's the Plaid of Carnegie Tech against the Violet of New York University at the Stadium this afternoon, and Carnegie, despite its setback by Notre Dame at South Bend two weeks ago, will enter the game the favorite to win.

Both teams have been defeated, Coach Chick Meehan's eleven having bowed to the unbeaten Fordham University team by the narrow margin of 7 to 0 on a fumbled pass from center for a punt at the Yankee Stadium in New York last Saturday.

Today's will be the fifth meeting of the rivals, and Carnegie has won only one of the four clashes that have been entered into the records, turning in a 20-0 surprise triumph last Thanksgiving Day after a disappointing showing against Pitt.

The first game between the teams was staged in 1926, when two field goals by Ken Strong accounted for a 6-0 triumph for the Violets. The following year, the Tartans lost, 20-6, and, in 1928, they were knocked out of the national championship by bowing, 27-13, in the final game of the

TOLD TO NAME OWN PRICE, PRIEST SAYS; GRENET BOLTS PINCHOT

Assemblyman Samuel J. Grenet, Twenty-seventh Ward Republican chairman, was revealed today as a bolter from Pinchot to Hemphill, the Liberal-Democratic nominee for governor, as the Rev. Father James R. Cox declared he had been asked to "name his own price" to leave the ranks of Pinchot supporters and join the Hemphill forces.

Other developments which make the windup of the gubernatorial campaign a real political battle are:

1—County Controller Robert G. Woodside's announcement of his bolt to the Hemphill camp following Civil Service Commissioner F. H. Frederick's announcement that he would not support Pinchot.

2—The North Side Republican rally this afternoon with virtually all Republican leaders expected to be present and pledging themselves to support Pinchot.

3—Indorsement of Pinchot, and optimistic prediction of his election by all city vice chairmen.

4—National appeal for Republican candidates to be made hour over a nation-wide radio hookup by James Francis Burke, general counsel for the Republican National Committee.

Emissary Offered Cash—Father Cox

The Rev. Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Catholic Church, today declared that he had been offered his own price to desert the cause of Gifford Pinchot and come out for John M. Hemphill, the Liberal-Democratic nominee for governor.

According to Father Cox, a representative of the Hemphill organization entered the parish house at 67 Seventeenth street yesterday, and in the presence of another priest asked Father Cox to swing to Hemphill.

SPEAKS FOR PINCHOT

His reply was to deliver a speech for Pinchot at a rally held last night in the Ambridge High School, in which he referred to the attempt to bribe him.

Father Cox, asked concerning his reported statements at Ambridge last night, said:

"An emissary of the Hemphill organization came to me yesterday in the parish house here and said if I would go over to Hemphill any price I would name would be O. K.

"No sum was mentioned. I will not reveal the identity of the man who came to me.

"FRIEND OF WORKER"

"My reply to this proposal was to go to Ambridge last night where I strongly urged the audience to vote for Pinchot. I told them that Pinchot is a friend of laboring men. Pinchot is trying to live by the constitution and make every man behave whether he is big or little. We know that when the button is pushed, Hemphill moves."

Father Cox, over the radio from his pulpit, has been championing the candidacy of Pinchot ever since the campaign began.

Grenet, Woodside Bolt From Pinchot

Assemblyman Samuel J. Grenet, Republican chairman of the Twenty-seventh Ward and president of the Fort Pitt Brewing Company, has announced his intention to support John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal party nominee for governor, in opposition to Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee.

Grenet's action followed, but apparently was not influenced by, the announcement of County Controller Robert G. Woodside that he was supporting Hemphill and that he would be chairman of the final Liberal Party rally Monday in North Side Carnegie Hall.

FREDERICK BOLTS

Yesterday afternoon Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, declared he would not support Pinchot, but did not declare for Hemphill, though he is considered to have leanings in that direction.

Grenet is the only ward chairman that has defied Mayor Charles H. Kline's repeated request to "vote and work for the election of Pinchot and the ent[illegible]

Hoover, Jr., Reaches Asheville Cottage

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Herbert Hoover, Jr., reached Asheville at 8:10 a. m. today, where he will recuperate from a tubercular infection contracted this summer.

He went immediately to Blue Briar cottage, on Sunset Hill, where his wife has been awaiting him several days. Apparently he stood the trip south well.

Young Hoover's mother did not accompany him to Asheville.

School Head Convicted On Woman's Charge

BROOKVILLE, Pa., Nov. 1.—Prof. Charles A. Anderson, superintendent of the Jefferson County schools, was found guilty last night of charges brought against him by Miss Anna Kyle, 41, his former assistant. The woman charged that Anderson was the father of her 8-month-old son. The jury received the case at 4 o'clock and brought in a verdict at 6:45.

Professor Anderson had been on trial for the last two days, during which time he denied the charges of his former assistant and brought numerous witnesses to support his alibi. During the closing hours of the trial, Professor Anderson called upon his wife and three children to prove Miss Kyle's accusation untrue.

Attorney Raymond Brown for the defense, bitterly scored Dr. and Mrs. J. C. McKinley for revealing the birth of the child, and Mrs. McKinley's letter to Anderson threatening if he did not resign she would make public all the facts in the case.

100,000 IGNORE CAR INSPECTION

Although more than 100,000 motorists throughout the state failed to have their automobiles inspected, there have been no arrests reported by city, county or state officers this morning. Yesterday was the last day for inspection. Autoists are subject to penalties if they operate uninspected machines today.

Many machines were to be seen on city streets minus the stickers indicating they could be legally operated.

SNOW DELAYS PLANE HERE

The pilot, Edward Couples, enroute from Cleveland, circled over the Ohio River for two hours, guided by the glare of blast furnaces. Finally he landed safely at Bettis Field.

The temperature dropped to 32 this morning. Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted southerly winds, fair skies and rising temperature tomorrow.

Notables to Hear Pioneer Program at KDKA Fete

A reproduction of the world's first radio program, broadcast from Pittsburgh November 2, 1920, will feature the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce banquet in the William Penn Hotel Monday night, marking the tenth anniversary of the radio broadcast. The chamber is sponsoring the celebration in recognition of the tenth birthday of station KDKA.

Amos 'n' Andy, Floyd Gibbons and other radio acts will entertain. Dr. H. P. Davis, Dr. Frank Conrad and J. C. McQuiston, three men who pioneered in broadcasting, will have a position of honor at the dinner table.

Dr. E. J. Van Etten, of Calvary Episcopal Church, the first minister in the world to broadcast a church service, will give the invocation. James Rae, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, will be chairman and Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, will be toastmaster.

Republican ticket." In a statement last night, Grenet said:

"Nothing can be more important to an individual than to stand by his convictions and his principles. Everyone knows how I stand on the question of prohibition repeal. For that reason could not support Mr. Pinchot.

"I am supporting John M. Hemphill, the Liberal party nominee, because I believe the prohibition laws should be repealed. I am convinced that prohibition has caused hypocrisy, deceit and cheating on the part of the people, has corrupted public officials and is responsible for the murder of innocent men and women.

"This is the first real opportunity the people of Pennsylvania have had to give expression on this most vital question. It is important that they elect a governor who shall voice Pennsylvania's demand upon Washington for a change, backing up the great states which now are moving in this common direction.

"John M. Hemphill may be depended upon to fight for the repeal of the Snyder-Armstrong act, a most iniquitous piece of legislation, and for a repeal or modification of the laws based on the Eighteenth Amendment."

In a statement last night, Woodside declared:

"I am for John M. Hemphill for governor. In the coming election I shall remain regular. I shall place my mark at the head of the Republican column and then place another opposite the name of Hemphill in the Liberal party column.

"In doing so I shall be vastly more regular than the organization candidate for governor was when he voted for the Democratic candidate in 1926."

SPEAKS DESPITE THREATS

Woodside declared he had felt it his duty as a Republican officeholder to remain silent as to his position, but that in view of certain threats, manifestly made to influence his political decision, he announced his stand. He said:

"I feel that I would be a coward and hypocrite if I did not voice my sentiments at this time. I became somewhat accustomed to jeopardy in the Spanish-American and World wars and have repeatedly risked my political future in the interest of my soldier comrades, so threats mean nothing to me. I have always been a Republican, but first and above all I make my decisions as an American and a man."

Woodside averred that Pennsylvania has done less for her soldiers than almost any other state in the Union because of the influence of "the super-lobbyist, Senator Grundy." He asserted:

"During Pinchot's administration as governor, this influence caused him to double-cross the service men and women of our state. Grundy again is backing Pinchot so all we can expect in the event of Pinchot's election is opposition to the interests of the veterans.

RALLY MONDAY

Other speakers expected to appear with Hemphill Monday night are Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent and radio talker, and John Lynn, former editor of the New York Globe.

In announcing the rally, Arthur Scully, Liberal party county chairman, said last night:

Our movement is now developing into a landslide. The people of entire Western Pennsylvania are aroused against Pinchot. Our campaign has shown this political specialist that he cannot fool all the people all the time."

men of the 32 Pittsburgh wards, excepting one, met in Hotel Henry headquarters of the Republican campaign committee yesterday and gave optimistic reports indicating substantial majorities for all nominees.

The exception was Mrs. Winnifred I. Foley, vice chairman of the Nineteenth Ward, who submitted a letter stating she was unable to attend the meeting and expressing the belief that the ward would give a big majority for the ticket.

Besides women leaders of city wards, the meeting was attended by women members of the state committee and Mrs. Suzanne Beatty, assistant city solicitor, all of whom expressed confidence of a sweeping victory. Mrs. Laura J. Hinnau, vice chairman of the Republican County Committee, presided.

Mrs. Morgart invited the women and their escorts to a political tea this afternoon in the home of Mrs. Nell Bartley, 405 South Pacific avenue, in the interest of Pinchot and his running mates.

M'GOVERN LAUDS PINCHOT

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, western field marshal of Pinchot's primary campaign, lauded the Republican gubernatorial nominee in a speech yesterday at a meeting of the Henry George Club in the Chamber of Commerce dining room.

Later, McGovern called attention to campaign literature issued in behalf of John M. Hemphill, Democratic nominee for governor, that apparently was printed in Chicago. McGovern declared:

"The only distinguishable mark upon it (indicating where it was printed) is the imprint of 'Franklin Company, Chicago.' This should be very effective in advancing Mr. Hemphill's interests among the ranks of local organized labor, especially in the printing trades, where the unemployment situation is, locally, particularly acute.

"Although Mr. Hemphill and his family may have lived in Pennsylvania for 225 years, it is perfectly apparent that the powers behind his candidacy have no state boundaries and perfectly apparent that Mr. Hemphill's voice does not, even now, carry any weight in the councils of the Liberal party.

"When, simultaneously with the issuance of this literature, the Liberal party advertises in the daily press that Mr. Hemphill is 'the wage earner's own choice for governor,' does it refer to the wage earners of Pennsylvania or the wage earners of Illinois?"

BURKE ON RADIO FOR G. O. P.

James Francis Burke, general counsel for the Republican National Committee, will deliver a final appeal Monday for the election of Republican congressional nominees.

He will speak at 8 p. m. from Station WCAE, and the speech will be broadcast over a national network.

Burke was called upon to deliver a similar final appeal before the national elections of 1928.

He will speak later in the evening over Station KDKA in connection with the tenth anniversary of that station.

Plunges to Death During Revelry

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Ill health today was assigned as cause of the suicide of Joseph Benford, 50, wealthy Easterner, who was killed last night when he plunged from the top of the Mayfair Hotel, a center of film colony social activity.

Benford's plunge came at the height of a Halloween celebration at the hotel.

PINCHOT RAPS 'GOUGERS'

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Gifford Pinchot, Republican gubernatorial nominee, last night continued his bombardment of public utilities companies which, he charged, were "gouging" their patrons. He served notice he intended to launch an investigation into records of utility companies if elected, and accused Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, of diverting funds of the company into political channels.

After issuing his statement on Atterbury, the former governor's voice became hoarsened by his many speeches from the stump in the outdoors that he could barely talk above a whisper into a microphone.

Curley River-Job Aid Plan Wins More Support

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—(Universal)—Widespread endorsement has been given to Mayor James M. Curley's $1,000,000,00 project to develop the Mississippi River in order to stimulate business and relieve unemployment.

Prominent men in almost every field of endeavor have joined the chorus of approval—college professors, economists, business men and public officials.

Gov. Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts, said:

"I believe that the suggestion of Mayor Curley to President Hoover for the expenditure of a billion dollars for the permanent improvement of the Mississippi River and the consequent banishment of devastating periodical floods by means of vast impounding reservoirs and the deepening and widening of the river, is a practical and statesmanlike proposition."

James J. Phelan, prominent Boston banker, who heads Gov. Allen's emergency committee on unemployment, said:

"I am in favor of any necessary improvement that will give jobs to the unemployed."

Frank E. Lyman, state public works commissioner, said:

"I think Mayor Curley's plan should be carefully considered by President Hoover. This Mississippi problem is there and will have to be solved some time by some one. I think the idea is excellent and that it should be given every consideration."

Roger Babson, nationally-known statistician, said:

"Mayor Curley is absolutely right, both in his appeal for everyone to spend $20 and in the other extreme in asking Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the United States Treasury, to spend a billion dollars to develop the Mississippi River."

PASSENGER AIR LINE OPENS TO CINCINNATI

Plane Leaves Bettis Field, Launching New Service; Carries Mayor's Greetings

With letters from Mayor Charles H. Kline addressed to executives of cities on the route a trail-blazing plane took off from Bettis Field at 8 a. m. today, inaugurating passenger air services between here and Cincinnati.

The new link provides for stops at Huntington, W. Va., and Portsmouth, O. The plane, a six-passenger Ryan cabin monoplane, carrying four passengers, was scheduled to arrive in Cincinnati at 11:40 a. m.

The return trip was to begin at 1 p. m., arrive Portsmouth, 1:50 p. m., Huntington, 2:25 p. m. and Pittsburgh, 4:20 p. m. Officials of the Main Aeronautics Company, operators of the new line, were among the passengers.

Arrangements have been made at Lunken airport, Cincinnati, for passengers to transfer to planes for Chicago, Detroit, and other cities. Express service on the line began this week, cargo being carried in open biplanes. Passenger planes are equipped with heating equipment of the latest type. Service will be regular, serious weather handicaps being the only cancellation cause.

As stops were to be made on today's flight, the letters from Mayor Kline were to be presented to representatives of the mayors of Huntington and Portsmouth. R. E. "Dick" Copeland will be pilot. Schedule hours will be maintained daily.

Rates, which may be secured through the Automobile Club, Union Arcade, include, to Cincinnati, $30; to Portsmouth, $24; to Huntington, $20. Return, the rates are, Cincinnati to Portsmouth, $7; to Huntington, $30.

Pilots, besides Copeland, are Dick Laughlin and E. Q. B. Henriques.

RUM BIG ISSUE, HEMPHILL SAYS

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Rounding out a series of speeches in Carbon County with an address here last night, John M. Hemphill, Democrat-Liberal candidate for Governor, declared the prohibition question was the predominant issue of the present political campaign. He again urged the return of control of the liquor traffic to the states, "so that it can be taken out of the hands of bootleggers and corruptionists."

Sedgwick Kistler, Democratic candidate for United States Senate, asked the voters to approve the party plans for old age pensions, more liberal workmen's compensation law provisions, and unemployment insurance.

Both candidates joined in attacking Gifford Pinchot, the Republican nominee, as insincere in his promises to the electorate.

LOCAL LABOR ON U. S. JOBS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The government will have its construction work this winter done as far as possible by local labor employed at unreduced wages.

This policy is planned to give the maximum benefit of federal appropriations to each community in which construction is to be undertaken under the expanded and expedited program for unemployment relief.

An administration summary of work now under way or soon to be undertaken with federal funds has developed a total of expenditures approaching the $1,000,000,000 mark. This covers the government's loans through the Shipping Board for construction of merchant vessels by many American lines.

Weather Conditions.

A high developed eastward and overlies the central valleys and Eastern states, frosts to the Eastern Gulf and Northern Florida. High pressure also overlies the plateau, North Pacific states and central Rockies. A disturbance in trough form extends from Manitoba to Western Kansas. Light snow or rain fell in the lower lakes, New England and portions of the Appalachians; elsewhere fair weather prevails. Slight further falls in temperature occurred in the Gulf states east of the Mississippi, over most of the eastern states, and in Northern Montana. It is warmer in the plains and central Rocky Mountains.

River Conditions.

The rivers are stationary. Stage at Franklin is 0.2 foot; Lock No. 7, 10.2; Pittsburgh, 9.5; Dam No. 4, 9.1; Dam No. 6, 7.5; Dam No. 9, 8.1, and Dam No. 12, 4.0. The dams are up.

Aviation Bulletin.

Scattered to broken clouds will prevail over the airways this afternoon and tonight under the influence of a large high over Tennessee, with ceilings mostly unlimited; visibilities will be ample except where fogs prevent, possibly in portions of the mountains and smoke in cities due to expected light winds from the West or Southwest; temperatures will be about the same tonight over the middle districts, somewhat colder over Eastern sections and warmer over Western portions.

$2,000,000 Contracts Le... By County Board

The County Commissioners awarded contracts for approximately $2,000,000 worth of roads and bridges at their meeting yesterday.

The major contracts let were: Tenth Street Bridge, $746,878, and Boston Bridge, $197,354, both of which were given to the Vang Construction Company. The superstructure of the West End-North Side Bridge was awarded to the American Bridge Company at $783,979.50, and a $240,708 contract on the Flaugherty Run road was awarded to Mike Manella.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern voted "No" on both awards to the Vang Construction Company.

McGovern told his associates that $100,000 of the Tenth Street Bridge contract is for razing the present structure. He said:

"This old bridge is perfectly good and useful. It can be taken down and moved to the Squaw Run location and there used to span the Allegheny River to the new Allegh... River boulevard. With very ...tle repairing, some of the o... standing bridge engineers in ... county tell me, it will be ... for 50 years' service ther... also have an offer from a ... who will take the bridge ... for nothing if the county ... give it to him."

Commissioner Joseph G. ... strong said:

"The Tenth Street Brid... no good. It wouldn't do ... creek. It's sunk 12 inches. ... It's in as bad condition as ... Twenty-second Street Brid... which will have to be rebu... next year. And we don't wa... anybody coming in and offer... to take the bridge down ... nothing who will take a river... two out and leave it stand."

Armstrong then moved a... of the contract to the Vang ... pany. Commissioner E. V. ... cock voted with him. McGo... voted "No."

WORLD-WIDE HOOKUP FOR HEARST

Publisher's Radio Talk o... Temperance Plan Sunda... To Be Carried Overse...

The address of William Randolph Hearst on "A Temperance Plan to Supplant Prohibition," which will be heard in this district during Collier's Hour from 8:15 to 9:15 tomorrow night over KDKA, literally will be heard around the world.

So universal is the interest aroused since the announcement of Mr. Hearst's topic that Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company officials have notified the National Broadcasting Company that the address received over KDKA will be ... broadcast over short-wave station WEXK at Saxonburg ... carrying the publisher's word... all parts of the world.

Locally Mr. Hearst's address has gripped public interest and it is expected that Collier's Hour tomorrow night will find one of the largest audiences in Western Pennsylvania history grouped about receiving sets.

RARE RADIO FEAT

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(Universal.)—When William Randolph Hearst speaks to a nation-wide audience tomorrow evening as the guest of Colliers over the National Broadcasting Company's system, an unusual technical feat will be accomplished.

The Colliers radio hour originates in the New York Times Square Studios of the National Broadcasting Company. Mr. Hearst will speak in the studios of KFI, the Earle C. Anthony station, in this city. The publisher's topic will be "A Temperance Plan to Supplant Prohibition."

In order to co-ordinate the two sections of the program on either side of the continent, the technical staff of the National Broadcasting Company has been at work for almost a week.

SPEED OF LIGHT

Like a river, a radio program must flow in a given direction. It is technically impossible to feed any audible program into the NBC networks from such widely-divergent points as New York and Los Angeles. To make this natural flow, when Mr. Hearst talks into the microphone in Los Angeles his voice will travel with the speed of light across the continent on a leased wire to New York and from there be directed into the huge transcontinental network of the National Broadcasting Company.

But through the wonder of radio, not a second's time is lost and Mr. Hearst's voice will be heard on the Pacific coast as he speaks in spite of the fact that his voice will have crossed the continent and back again.

With the interest aroused by Mr. Hearst's announced topic plus the regular Colliers audience of millions, it is safe to assume that probably one of the greatest groups of listeners of the year will be at the radio sets of the nation when the Colliers Hour will be on the airlanes.

INTEREST INTENSE

The interest here is intense since the first announcement that Mr. Hearst would discuss the Temperance Plan to Supplant Prohibition." From other sections of the country come the same reports.

In addition to the splendid dramatic and musical presentations that feature the Sunday evening Colliers radio program, Jo... J. Raskob will be heard. The financier and chairman of the Democratic National Committee will speak on "The Restoration of Prosperity."

John B. Kennedy, associate editor of Colliers, will be master of ceremonies. Speaking in the New York studios he will introduce Mr. Hearst, who will be in the Los Angeles studios. Then the NBC technical staff, both in and in New York will swing the leased wire without the loss of a second and Mr. Hearst will be heard.

Acting for Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, ... Gilman, vice president in charge of the western division is personally handling the Hearst feature of the program insofar as the coast technical arrangements are concerned.

THE STATE GAME PROTECTOR EARLY IN THE FIELD

Hunters Afield for Game; 27,000 Licensed Here As Season Starts

The hunting season for small game and bears opened today.

There were 27,000 licenses issued in Allegheny County, and according to the State Game Commission, before the hunting season is over there will be more than 500,000 licenses tacked on the backs of that many men and women in the state. In addition farmers, their families and hired help will hunt on their properties and with permission they will hunt on adjacent farms without being required to take out licenses. Combining the paid and gratis permits, more than 1,000,000 persons will take to the field and woods in the state this season.

HABITAT CHANGED

Although the season opened today the shooting will not start before Monday, for many of the sportsmen who like to spend more than one day in the field.

This season may be more of a test of the gunner's skill than recent ones have been, because the drought has forced game birds and animals out of their usual haunts and away from open spots, nearer to stream and water holes, according to reports of the State Game Commission's field officers.

Rabbits are so plentiful it was believed many gunners would get the bag limit today. It is likely 1,000,000 cottontails will be killed. Not a section of the state has reported a shortage of rabbits, and that is unusual.

VARIETY OF BIRDS

Bird hunters will have more variety this year. In addition to the turkey, ringneck and quail, an open season for one week has been declared on ruffed grouse, which was protected in all counties last year. The grouse season is from November 1 to 8, with a limit of two a day or eight for the week.

The season for ringneck pheasants is restricted from November 1 to 15, with a bag limit of two a day, six for the season.

Drug Store Fire Causes $2,000 Loss

UNIVERSAL BOY KILLED BY CAR

Thomas Tulentz, 12, of Universal, was killed last night when struck by an automobile on Universal road, according to a morgue report. According to police, the lad was killed by a car driven by E. W. Davenport, of 1 Pine street, Universal. Davenport stopped his car to pick up the lad, but he had already been picked up by a motorist who was riding in another car. Davenport immediately went to a Justice of the Peace and told him of the accident. He was later held for the coroner.

Tracing the license number of the alleged hit-and-run car, County Detective Samuel Whisner arrested E. W. Davenport, of 1 Pine street, Universal.

Two men were injured, one critically, when their automobile crashed into a pole at Verona boulevard and Lincoln avenue early today. The victims are Gilbert Schaffer, 19, 629 Montclair street, driver, with a fractured skull, and Robert McAfee, 23, of 142 Ulysses street.

Francis Duffy, of Flowers street, driver of a milk wagon; his helper, Steve Noraves, of 4415 Chatsworth street, and Virginia Noul, 29, of 600 Armandale street, were injured when the truck and an automobile in which the woman was a passenger, crashed early today at Chestnut and North Canal streets, North Side.

Isabel Star, 19, of Nineteenth street, South Side, and J. S. Stanley, 23, of 2405 Jane street, were slightly injured when their car was overturned by a hit-run automobile at East and Tripoli streets.

HERO FUND POST TO ALLDERDICE

Taylor Allderdice was named secretary and manager to succeed F. M. Wilmot, who died October 22, at the fall meeting of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission yesterday in its offices in the Oliver Building.

C. B. Ebersol was elected assistant secretary and assistant manager, and Moorhead B. Holland and John G. Frazer were chosen to fill two vacancies on the commission. V-L. P. Shriver was named treasurer to succeed W. H. Stevenson, who died September 23.

Forty-six acts of heroism were recognized at the meeting, and in each case a bronze medal was awarded. Nine of the heroes lost their lives, and to the dependents of one of these a pension of $960 a year was granted; to the dependents of three of the others, $1,500 was granted, to be applied as the commission may sanction.

One of the heroes sustained injuries, and disablement benefits of $1,000 were granted him. In addition, in 10 cases awards totaling $16,000 were appropriated for educational purposes, payments to be made as needed and approved; and in 26 cases awards aggregating $22,000 were made. Five of the awards were granted Pennsylvanians, while others go to heroes in other states.

Physician Injured In Crash Near Death

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Dr. F. G. Bishop, 60, prominent Ebensburg physician, was badly injured today when his car skidded and crashed into a telephone pole near Ebensburg. Both legs, an arm and his shoulder were fractured. One leg was also practically severed by the glass from the windshield. His condition is reported critical.

The followers of Runge, who has been a Republican, admitted that they simply changed the wording on a 1928 Smith-for-President banner, because, after all, Runge has been mistaken for Smith many times.

FAIL TO CHECK COAST FIRES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Threatening estates and beach property a brush fire ran over the Malibu Mountains last night and today was eating its way into the beautiful Santa Monica range.

The blaze started in Ventura County, and last night rolled over the Los Angeles County line. It blackened 8,000 acres of valuable watershed, burned two $15,000 homes, 40 head of cattle and a score of small summer homes, and continued to force back 2,000 men along its 12-mile front.

At midnight it crept across Los Alisos Canyon and raged southward, threatening to break into a section covered with manzanita and buckthorn 20 feet high, in which no fire had burned for 60 years.

Fire wardens said once in this dense underbrush they doubted whether it could be halted short of Hollywood city limits. A changeable wind was retarding its progress.

Murder Charged To 3 Coast Guards

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Warrants charging first-degree murder were issued here last night for three government agents in connection with the disappearance Wednesday of Willie Demeritt, rum runner, off the Florida Keys. The men named are H. B. Bowry, chief boatswain commanding Coast Guard Picket Boat 9,170; Everett Charlow, engineer of the craft, and Oscar Lounders, customs agent.

CHICAGO MAYOR FIGHTS FOR LIFE

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Mayor William Hale Thompson today was fighting a battle more important to him than any he had faced in his spectacular political career.

Peritonitis—a dread aftermath of appendicitis operations, possible symptoms of which were reported in his case—was the Mayor's foe, but whether he would win or lose could not be told until some time tomorrow afternoon, physicians said.

Courage—that all-important ally in fighting disease—however, was with the Mayor, with his favorable reaction from the shock of the operation, performed at 2 p. m. yesterday, gave his friends hope that the ultimate outcome would be victory.

The appendicitis attack caught the Mayor in the midst of a stormy political campaign in which he, although a Republican, had come out in opposition to the party's nominee for United States Senator, Congressman Ruth McCormick, and at a time when there has been talk that he would seek a fourth term at the mayoralty primary next spring.

Boy Killed by Shot While Playing Prank

William and several other boys were throwing rocks at a high fence near a junk yard, when someone fired a shot. The bullet struck a piece of steel and ricocheted, hitting the boy.

Robert McCabe, son of the owner of the junk yard, was taken into custody for questioning.

Tax Plea Filed in Will of Inventor

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Executors of the estate of Joseph A. Williams, pioneer in developing automobile ignition systems, who died a year ago, today filed application for determination of inheritance tax on a valuation of $6,392,000. This sum does not include three trusts said to total more than $2,500,000 established at Buffalo. Williams and his company held patent rights to the Ford ignition system.

GUSHER STILL MENACES CITY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Roaring defiance to experts seeking to curb it, a wild gusher at the city's edge continued today its threat of fire disaster as it showered black clouds of oil on abandoned homes.

As workmen rushed to completion the forging of a huge steel bonnet to drop over the mouth of the spouting well, firemen announced the danger of explosion had lessened, due to dissipation of low hanging clouds of gas.

As a result of their tests firemen reduced to an area 36 blocks square the fire prohibition zone which has been maintained since the well broke through its mastergate Thursday night.

The geyser of oil has caused the abandonment of homes by some 300 residents of the district, the closing of six schools and the suspension of all automobile and railroad traffic in the district affected.

The well has an estimated daily flow of 60,000 barrels of oil and 100,000,000 feet of gas.

Sea Captain Fleeced By Race Swindlers

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Police thought everybody knew the horse race swindle, but today they discovered Capt. James Kennedy, a seafaring man, had given two strangers $16,000 to bet for him on a "sure thing." Authorities are seeking the two men and the money.

Merrymakers Defy Chill To Step Out Here With Halloween Goblins

Witches, ghosts, goblins, harlequins, kings and hoboes paraded throughout Pittsburgh and its suburbs last night in defiance of the brisk, biting wind that blew in from the North as the celebration marking the eve of All Saints' Day was held.

Two accidents marred the celebration. One occurred in Bellevue, where Clarence Lee, 22, of 15 Charles street, Emsworth, was burned when a cigaret he was smoking set fire to the Hawaiian costume he was wearing. He was riding in his automobile at Brighton road and Lincoln avenue when he was found ablaze by John Patterson of Bellevue, who took him to the Suburban General Hospital. His condition was regarded as not serious.

Mary Riley, 7, a Negro, of 622 Manilla way, was in Belvedere Hospital today with burns suffered when her costume ignited while she was standing in front of a stove in her home. An excited member of the household ran to Shetland and Paulson avenues and sounded a fire alarm.

In the city proper, hoodlums caused the Bureau of Fire employes much trouble by sounding false alarms. More than a dozen alarms were sent in, according to the operator at the fire bureau, and all of them proved to be the result of hoodlums' efforts to be funny.

20,000 VIEW N. S. PARADE

Perhaps the biggest celebration of all took place on the North Side, where more than 20,000 persons gathered to watch the grand parade of floats and mummers which lasted for almost an hour.

In the 500 block, East Ohio street, where the reviewing stand was situated, thousands jammed the thoroughfare as the judges, members of the East North Side Business Men's Association, who sponsored the affair, picked the winners.

The Allegheny celebration was the greatest in years and drew spectators from all parts of the city, according to Capt. Anthony Block, who was in charge of the special police detail which had charge of traffic. The parade was followed by a street dance.

PRIZES AWARDED

Residents of the North Boroughs flocked to Bellevue for the biggest district celebration ever staged. Two bands, two calliopes and many floats featured the parade which marched through the principal streets of the borough for almost an hour. More than 100 prizes were awarded for costumes worn by the mummers.

The winners in the North Side celebration included: The prettiest girl, Anne Gilbel; most original costume, Roy M. Kraus; the ugliest costume, Clyde Mawhinn; most elaborate costu... Bertha ...tic; the most characteristic costume, James A. Maroneck, and best couple, Helen Basellvige and Betty Rayner.

In the outlying district, the biggest celebration was held at Duquesne, where residents of the Youghiogheny district gave a great demonstration. The California Drum Corps was awarded the first prize in the parade, and numerous other individual prizes were given for costumes.

In the Duquesne parade, four five and drum corps and mummers from McKeesport, Elizabeth, East McKeesport, East Pittsburgh and other nearby towns tried for prizes.

PARADE FIFTH AVENUE

In the downtown section hundreds of mummers from the North Side celebration and those in the East End and South Side gathered during the late hours for an impromptu parade down Fifth avenue, which was roped off for the occasion.

East Liberty's evening was featured by a masquerade party at the Y. M. C. A., while the South Side Business Men's Association presented a program including a parade and dance, which attracted visitors from Carrick, Brentwood and Mt. Oliver.

Coolidge Urges Sympathy With Europe's Peace Aims

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 1.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the constructive efforts our government is making for international peace. We have not only secured by two epoch-making treaties an agreement among the great naval powers for complete limitation on the building of all kinds of war vessels, but we are taking an active part in the movement to compose the differences between France and Italy so that they may be able to join in a treaty to the same end.

Calvin Coolidge

When Europe is financially depressed, when taxation is an almost unbearable burden, her people and governments will naturally desire to take advantage at once of the savings that can be made in public expenditure by reduced armaments. They could then avoid the new outlays for fortifications and other equipment proposed in the name of national security. Unless the burden is diminished the people involved will reach a point where national security will be of no benefit. They will have nothing to secure.

We should not criticize. We should not under-estimate their great difficuties. It is only through true sympathy that we can help. We seek to promote a humanitarian policy of peace and friendship among distressed people.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Reed Urges Job Insurance At Anniversary Dinner

An appeal for the extension of insurance to cover the risk of unemployment was made last night by Senator David A. Reed in an address at the fiftieth anniversary banquet of the Edward A. Woods Company at the William Penn Hotel.

Senator Reed declared that there are four great fears in the minds of most individuals—death, illness, old age and unemployment. Insurance has made rapid progress in protecting against the first three of these, but he stated that nothing has been done to cover the last risk.

He stated that government does most things badly and that it is particularly incompetent in the field of insurance, so that it is the duty of private initiative to solve the problem of unemployment insurance.

In opening his address Senator Reed expressed the greetings of President Hoover, who communicated with him by telegram shortly before the dinner.

Addresses were also made... Thomas I. Parkinson, president... the Equitable Life Assurance ...ciety; Col. Henry J. Powell, ...ager of the Cincinnati-Lou... agency, and William M. ... manager of the Woods comp...

The Rev. Dr. Walter Schuette, president of the eastern district of the American Lutheran Church, will address the meeting in the Mosque, which will be sponsored by the Lutheran Brotherhood of Pittsburgh. He will speak on "The Great Confession's Vitality." In the Music Hall the meeting will be conducted under auspices of the Lutheran Church Extension Society. The Rev. A. G. Merkens, of the First Trinity Lutheran Church, will speak on "The Dynamic of the Reformation."

A feature of the meeting to be held in the Mosque will be the first public appearance of the Pittsburgh Lutheran Chorus, which is composed of 150 voices, under the direction of Homer Ochsenhirt.

The combined choirs of the First Trinity Church and St. Andrews Church will present a musical program in the Music Hall, which will be preceded by an organ recital by Miss Hazel Drake.

Lutheran churches in this district will eliminate their evening services to permit members of congregations to attend the meeting. Clergymen of the local churches will occupy places on the speakers' platform.

WEDDERSPOON TO SPEAK HERE

The Rev. Dr. William R. Wedderspoon, of Chicago, and former pastor of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue and Rippey street, will speak at Emory Church Thursday night on "The Black Tulip." The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Elizabeth D. Van Kirk Auxiliary, a foreign missionary society.

A musical program, consisting of organ selections by Harold Schunemann, organist, and Scotch songs by James D. Coullie, of Pittsburgh, will complete the program. It is expected that a large number of Scots from Pittsburgh and vicinity will attend the service.

BERNADETTE OF LOURDES

MARY ZALAC PLAYING THE ROLE "BERNADETTE OF LOURDES"

Pittsburghers Play Roles In Film of Tech Girl's Story of Lourdes

The motion picture, "Bernadette of Lourdes," which will be shown at a downtown theater soon, is an adaptation of a story written by Mary C. Gallagher, of Pittsburgh, who studied at the Carnegie Tech School of Drama. While many scenes of the shrine of Lourdes are shown, others were taken in Pittsburgh and surrounding districts.

Several of the characters appearing in the play are Pittsburghers. Miss Mary Zolac, of 1519 Rialto street, takes the leading role. Others appearing in the picture are Miss Margaret Carr, of 2119 Liberty avenue, and Ettors Coffrini, of 306 Stratmore avenue, Crafton.

Scenes filmed during the pilgrimage by Father Cox to Lourdes last summer will also be shown. Special arrangements have been made to care for parochial school children throughout the Pittsburgh district.

ALL-SAINTS DAY OBSERVED BY CATHOLICS

Special Masses Pay Honor To Christian Martyrs; Founded in 9th Century

By the REV. DR. T. F. COAKLEY

The Feast of All Saints has been celebrated on November 1 since the ninth century. Its purpose was not merely to honor the saints before and since that time who have no special feast day set apart for them, but primarily to honor all the martyrs buried in the Pantheon at Rome, who gave up their lives for their faith during the three centuries of persecution under the Roman emperors. Therefore, the Feast of All Saints has its principal significance in recalling the definite triumph of Christianity over Paganism.

The prayers at mass on the Feast of All Saints are taken from the Bible and they give us an admirable vision of heaven from the seventh chapter of the Apocalypse, showing the vast multitude of every nation and tribe of every people and tongue, standing before the throne of God in heaven. The choirs of angles, the apostles and prophets, the martyrs crimsoned in their blood, confessors of the faith, and the chaste virgins are all there in a majestic cortege. Among that uncounted batallion are some of our own family, relations and friends enjoying the eternal bliss of heaven. The gospel in the mass is taken from the opening lines of the Sermon on the Mount, indicating that the eight beatitudes are the normal means employed by the saints to reach heaven. Throughout the Catholic world the Feast of All Saints is a holy day of obligation, on which all are obliged to assist at mass, just as if it were Sunday. In nearly all the city churches in Pittsburgh the masses are at the same hours as on Sundays.

JONES TO STAY ANOTHER WEEK

The evangelistic services held by Bob Jones, Southern evangelist, in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, will be continued until Wednesday of next week, according to an announcement by the evangelist. Services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. The closing service will be held Wednesday evening in Carnegie Hall, North Side, when he will speak on "Which Way Are We Headed?"

The evangelist has announced the inauguration tomorrow of Sunday and daily radio broadcasts over station KQV. The first broadcast will be given tomorrow at 9 a. m., while daily talks will start Monday at 3 p. m. The Rev. Jones will be heard in the first four broadcasts, while an assistant will be placed here to conduct the daily sermons on simple lessons on life. It will be the first broadcasting of a nation-wide program planned by the evangelist.

Campaigning

BETTY WEAKLAND, 14

GIRL TO OPEN REVIVAL

Miss Betty Weakland, 14, of Columbus, O., will open a three weeks' evangelistic campaign tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock in the First Baptist Church of Rochester, Pa. She will be assisted by her father, the Rev. J. Roy Weakland, who will preach each Sunday morning and direct the affairs of the campaign, and Miss Ruth B. Taylor, pianist and soloist.

Four churches are uniting in the services. The meetings will be undenominational. Miss Weakland will preach every night during the campaign which is scheduled to close November 23. In December she is expected to conduct a three weeks' campaign in the Shoemaker United Brethren Church in McKeesport.

Pre-Thanksgiving Service Scheduled

Services preliminary to the Thanksgiving season will be conducted tomorrow at the Salvation Army auditorium, 425 Second avenue. The Holiness meeting at 11 a. m. will be under the direction of Mrs. George Brooks and Mrs. W. B. Fowle, of the headquarters staff. At the 8 p. m. service Adjt. George Brooks will speak on "His Government and Peace."

Gospel Service at Bible School Chapel

Interdenominational Gospel services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. in the chapel of the Western Pennsylvania Bible School, 308 Cedar avenue, North Side. Dean Charles Embrey will be the speaker.

PASSION PLAY OPENS HERE ON NOV. 17

Famous Freiburg Players To Appear at Mosque at Request of 700 Churches

At the request of many ministers of Pittsburgh and through the co-operation of more than 700 churches of the Pittsburgh district, the Freiburg Passion Play, of Freiburg, Baden, Germany, will be presented the week of November 17 in the Syria Mosque.

The Freiburg Passion Play has come down through the centuries, growing from a cast of four monks, who played in the Freiburg Cathedral in 1264, into one of the largest casts ever to be assembled on an American stage.

The principal parts of the Freiburg Passion Play are passed from generation to generation. Training for the roles that are to be played in later life is begun at childhood, as is the case with Adolf Fassnacht, the present Christus of the play. With him on this first American tour are his wife and daughter in the roles of Mary the Mother and Mary Magdalene.

The play was brought to America by the city of St. Joseph, Mo., to dedicate the civic bowl of that city. So incessant were the requests of other cities that the play remain that Mr. Fassnacht consented.

OPEN WHEELER MEMORIAL

BROOKFIELD, O., Nov. 1.—The new Wayne B. Wheeler Memorial Church here is to be dedicated Sunday. The church is named for the late Anti-Saloon League leader because he was born in Brookfield.

Speakers of the day will be Dr. Albert Edwin Smith, formerly president of Ohio Northern University, and Dr. W. E. Hammaker, Youngstown Trinity Church. Dr. Battelle McCarty, of Warren, superintendent of Youngstown district, will have charge of the dedication service in the afternoon.

'Punishment' Topic In Science Church

"Everlasting Punishment" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon to be read tomorrow in all Churches of Christ, Scientist. The golden text will be "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but who so confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."

Marian Stone Much Feted Before Her Marriage Monday Afternoon

Many entertainments will precede one of the most notable weddings of the fall season, that of Marian Stone, daughter of the Stephen Stones, of Forbes street, and Edward Purcell Mellon, II, the son of the T. A. Mellons, which will take place Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Sixth Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Stephen Stone gave a dinner on Thursday night, and last night, Mrs. Sidney A. Stewart, a sister of the bride-elect, gave the spinster dinner. This evening Louise Reed, who'll be maid of honor at the wedding, will give the rehearsal dinner in her home.

Tomorrow night Mrs. John B. F. Sellers, a sister of the bridegroom-elect, who'll be one of the bridesmaids, will entertain with a dinner for the bridal party and out-of-town guests. The day of the ceremony the J. Shirley Austins will entertain at the wedding breakfast in the Fox Chapel Golf Club. Mrs. Austin is also a sister of the bride and will be a bridesmaid.

Here for the wedding are Rose Grosvenor Davis and Kathleen Curtis, both of New York, who are house guests of the Stones, and Barbara and Gertrude Vander Poel, twin daughters of the Oakley Vander Poels, of New York, who are guests of Laura Evans. Miss Curtis will be a bridesmaid..

The atmosphere, the setting, and the film will all be decidedly Russian at the opening night of the Cinema Guild tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley.

Russian Evening

Members will find comfortable chairs and inviting sofas in the continental manner instead of the usual rows of hard, uncompromising chairs of Puritan America. And even the cigarets will be Russian!

Several days ago I mentioned that Elizabeth McKay and Frances Kier head the debutante aide committee. And all the buds who are in town will be there.

Added to the long list of patronesses for the event are Mrs. Herbert A. Gidney, Mrs. T. R. Dickson, Mrs. A. J. Vilsack, Mrs. Frank R. Stevens, and Mrs. T. D. Chantler.

* * *

One of the most entertained of the buds of the season of 1930 will be appealing young Frances Kier, auburn - haired daughter of the Frank J. Kiers, of Beechwood boulevard.

Party for Debutante

Frances will share honors at a dinner party on next Saturday night in the Longue Vue Country Club, which her cousin, Porter Sawyer Kier, Jr., son of the Porter Sawyer Kiers, of Darlington road, will give. Miss Margaret Smith, of Franklin, Pa., the bud's house guest, will share honors.

Virginia Drake, who'll make her debut on Wednesday and who will be the first girl presented to society this fall, is expected home tomorrow from New York, where she and her mother, Mrs. J. Frank Drake, are spending a few days.

* * *

Leaving tonight for Canada, where they'll meet the junior J. M. Schoonmakers on their houseboat, the Lucy K. for a week of duck shooting, are the junior G. Faber Downeys, the junior Henry Clay Bughmans, and Capt. and Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller.

The marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Slater, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas M. Slater, of Montclair, N. J., to the Rev. Robert Cargill Ward, son of Mrs. Ella S. Ward, of Pittsburgh, took place Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Guild room of the First Congregational Church in Montclair. A reception was held there after the wedding. The bride's father, who is pastor of the Montclair Reformed Presbyterian Church, was the officiant.

Montclair Wedding

Miss Eleanor Hunter, of Brooklyn, cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids included Mrs. John H. Slater, of Fort Washington, Pa., sister-in-law of the bride; Miss Sarah Hawthorne, of New York, and Miss Elizabeth and Miss Eleanor Ward, sisters of the bridegroom. Thomas J. Ward was his brother's best man.

The bride is a graduate of Geneva College, and Mr. Ward also attended Geneva and the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Presbyterian Church. He is also a graduate of Princeton and attended the University of Edinburgh a year.

From the estate, valued at more than $1,000,000, annual awards under the direction of New York newspaper editors will be made.

Bucknell Clock Rips 3 Floors in Crash

LEWISBURG, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Crashing through three of the five floors of the West College tower, Bucknell University, yesterday, the 3,300-pound weight of the class-of-1907 clock ripped holes six feet wide in the floors and ceilings. No one was injured, although the weight passed through two classrooms.

BORIS ATTACK JAILS REDS

CONSTANTINE STEPHANOVE, International News Service.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 1.—Hundreds of persons, most of them said to be Communists agitators, were under arrest throughout Bulgaria today as the result of a reported attack on the lives of King Boris and Queen Giovanna on their railway journey from Bourgas on the Black Sea to Sofia.

This, however, was the only incident to mar the triumphant arrival of the sovereigns in the capital. The train proceeded without stopping, and reached the Sofia station on schedule.

Immediately after the brief religious ceremony at the beautiful Orthodox Cathedral of Alexandra Nevsky, during which the Roman Catholic marriage ceremony performed at Assisi, Italy, was sanctioned by the Bulgarian ecclesiastical authorities, the royal couple were driven in state to the royal palace, where Giovanna, formerly an Italian princess, was installed as chatelaine.

King Boris' first official act following his return was the signing of a decree liberating more than 1,000 political prisoners.

Siple Given Cup At Meadville Fete

MEADVILLE, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Meadville's Halloween celebration was featured by the presentation to Paul A. Siple, Boy Scout with the Byrd South Pole expedition, of a 30-inch loving cup. Siple, a resident of Erie, was a student at Allegheny College and a scoutmaster here before going to the Antarctic. He has returned to continue his studies.

Irene Bordoni Must Pay Attorney $300

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Richard J. Mackey's suit for $1,500 against Irene Bordoni, musical comedy actress, for legal services, came to an end last night when a Supreme Court jury returned a verdict for $300 for counsel fees. Irene withdrew her $100,000 libel suit against Mackey.

Rockefeller Fund Totals 176 Millions

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Investments of the Rockefeller Foundation in stocks and bonds at the end of 1929 totaled $176,807,903, of which more than $50,000,000 was in securities of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the treasurer's report issued today said.

2 Girls to Sail 1,600 Miles in 22-Ft. Boat

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Miss Maude Hughes, of New York, and Miss Margaret Radcliffe, of Philadelphia, are starting Monday in a 22-foot motor boat for Miami, Fla. They plan seven overnight stops for food and rest on the trip of 1,600 miles.

Versailles Club Wins Trophy

The Versailles Township Woman's Club captured the silver basket awarded for percentage attendance at the quarterly meeting of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday, Thirteen out of the club's 24 members were in attendance. The meeting, which was held in the Youghiogheny Country Club with the McKeesport Woman's Club as the hostess group, was quite the largest (271 registered) and one of the most interesting the county organization has ever had.

Mrs. Adolph Schmidt, of course, was in the chair, and responded to the welcome from Mrs. J. H. W. Simpson, McKeesport's president. Mrs. John M. Phillips, of the home department, State Federation, addressed the morning session, giving one of those helpful, personal and enjoyable talks which are characteristic of this busy woman. Her subject was "The Responsibilities of Women Today." Irene Garrison Crambleti, with Mrs. William J. Osborne at the piano, contributed soprano solos to the morning program.

The headlight of the afternoon was the talk on Russia by the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, in which he told the women of the background of Russia's present situation, spoke of the status of women in that country, of religion and marriage and divorce.

What is going on in Russia is not a political experiment so much as it is an economic war, Dr. Ewers stated, citing as one proof that four men had been shot for hoarding metal money. Every thorough-going Communist is an atheist, the speaker stated, adding that he believed a new religion would come to Russia, and that it would have a social mould. Dr. Ewers indicts the old Greek Church for much of the present situation. Russia has merely traded bosses, he said, and today the worker is in the saddle and is just as ruthless and as inconsiderate as the old Czarists. America, he said, will feel the repercussions of Russia's explosions and needs to be informed of what he termed "the most dangerous thing on the map today."

Gives Talk On Russia

Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl explained the State Federation's plan for contributing towards the General Federation's endowment fund, and Mrs. George Regensburger sang, with Mrs. Osborne accompanying.

Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, Mrs. Hyman Silverman, Mrs. Charles H. Rugg, Mrs. Carl McKee and Mrs. E. R. Davis were elected to the nominating committee.

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Nov. 1.—By now we should all be perfectly attuned to the tunic. It is much liked by many of the best houses and many establishments are making a feature of the long tunic for their autumn and winter ensembles. The long tunic is a pleasing variant of the frock and when worn over a skirt to match the coat makes a very pleasing and original costume. The tunic is being treated to most elaborate ornamentation and is capable of being treated in a multitude of different ways. Embroidery, soutache braiding, metal threads, bead work are just some of the touches that embellish our old friend the tunic that had been laid aside for so long.

* * *

THE AFTERNOON ensemble is with us again and is much liked on brisk days. Coats are elaborately furred and almost every model is slightly or wholly form-fitting. We are sending you two sketches of one of Jean Patou's newest winter ensembles. He is one of the designers sponsoring the long tunic and he shows it in many of his newest creations. This particular model is of black broadcloth, the coat and skirt in this fabric and the long tunic in white georgette. The tunic is cleverly treated with the plastron front and the lower part of the wide bloused sleeves embroidered in white soutache work. Little borders of black satin edge the neckline and cuffs and provide a neat link with the rest of the ensemble. A new feature is the wide crush belt which is in one piece with the front panel of the tunic and ties in the back with a soft bow. The long coat is slightly form-fitting and has a border, deep cuffs and smart standing collar in black astrakan. The skirt is slightly longer than the coat.

SECOND ACT OF 'TANNHAUSER' ON RADIO TONIGHT

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Some of the most dramatic passages in "Tannhauser" will be conveyed to the radio public tonight at 10 when KDKA broadcasts the second act direct from the stage of the Chicago Civic Opera House via NBC. Paul Althouse takes the title role. Helen Freund becomes the shepherdess. Alexander Kipnis the Landgrave of Thuring'a. Lotte Lehmann as Elizabeth. Cyrena Van Gordon as Venus. Hans Hermann Nissen as Wolfram make up the cast. There's anything but quiet on the eastern front, with politicians dragging up the heavy artillery for a heavy salvo. Tonight we hear Dwight Morrow and Arthur M. Hyde on WCAE at 8 and Senator George W. Norris on WJAS at 10:30.

Our idea of a wit match would be to lock Don Bestor, Ben Bernie and Kay Kyser in a room for 30 minutes. Those boys are the wittiest orchestra leaders we've met.

* * *

Tom Gerun and Vincent Lopez are quiet, reserved but yet have magnetic personalities. They rarely crack wise.

* * *

And one fellow who never has time for puns is Art Landry. He's all business.

* * *

* * *

Guy Lombardo doesn't joke much but has a subtle wit. His puns are always sharp.

* * *

* * *

* * *

He always reminds us of a boy who would just as soon play "Huck Finn" as parade the stage as an m. c.

* * *

He's so busy he eats sandwiches when rehearsing in the studio.

* * *

Satan had a rival in the WCAE Hallowe'en sketch last night. He put on a hot program.

* * *

Tampa has finally recognized our ability. He gave us a solo part in the play last night—we rang the bell on his jokes. Oh yes, we slammed the door (a hinged plank) and turned on the wind (a barrel contraption with a piece of canvas stretched over it that when moved gives eery noises).

* * *

Fred Webber had one eye on the program script and the other under a bandage most of the evening. He looked like Floyd Gibbons.

* * *

In the Quo program (very good) he had to announce a selection, "Be Careful With Those Eyes." Fred was areful but he didn't dodge quick enough to miss a sprinkle of dirt on Smithfield street. An infection set in.

The LOUDSPEAKER

Unfounded Fears, Tex Rickard Knew. | That W-J Game, No Sneering.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Those sports promoters, who continue to assert that radio is a menace to the box office, need only turn their gaze to the football turnstiles to learn that their fears are unfounded. The arm chair arena may be crowded to the front door, but it lacks sufficient lure to empty a bench of any stadium when a good battle is scheduled. Neither rain, nor snow, nor a blast from the North Pole such as hovered over the Yankee Stadium during the Army-Notre Dame game last year holds back the spectators from the great gridiron struggles.

Louis Reid.

* * *

The parlor is warm and cozy. One can relax therein and have an exciting earful, free from the enormous inconveniences of the open stands, from the mauling and shoving that accompany a trip to any football field.

But no parlor in the land—what price television?—can bring the glamorous spectacle that is unfolded before the eyes when two evenly-matched teams oppose each other when a contest rich in tradition is at hand.

Open Stands Preferred To Understuffed Chairs

We had a choice of our own to make last Saturday. It was a question whether to worm through the teeming traffic of the Boston road in a tedious eight-mile drive to the Yale Bowl, New Haven, and sit cramped and cold for three bleak, rainy hours, watching 22 men battling below us or whether to draw up the overstuffed armchair, and, making faces at the wind and rain, sit in comfort while the game came through the air.

Did we choose the armchair? Would we choose squash pie when pumpkin was on the bill of fare?

* * *

It was the show that attracted us. A major football game is the grandest show available to the American people. Tex Rickard recognized the vast appeal of the gridiron and sought to his open air meetings of the ponderous palookas. He succeeded in weaving a tremendous spell about his heavyweight events. He brought for the first time in America, social prestige to a boxing bout.

Like the big business men of the football managements he had no fears of raids. With his uncanny sense of mob psychology he knew that no one who could get his hands on a ticket would stay away to hear an account of his best shows.

* * *

This listening post did cup an ear to the Lafayette-W. & J. game, played at night in the cavernous reaches of the Atlantic City Auditorium. Here was a genuine novelty on the loudspeakers—so novel, indeed, that we half expected to hear an announcer say that "250 dinner-jacketed guests of the Ritz Carlton have just taken their places on the forty yard line." However, we were informed of the presence of Dwight Morrow and of the weekend whereabouts of James J. Walker.

No Real Hot Sneers Heard In Campaign

The last week of the campaign is upon us, but the air is still free of any genuine hymn of hate. It takes a presidential year to bring out good, old-fashioned sneers. The most indignant political sneer ever to penetrate our ears was Senator Glass' "What has he ever done," hurled at Hoover in the pre-election days.

Both old parties are now bringing up their chief siege guns, though I miss the heavy cannonading of James A. Reed, of Missouri. Where is Reed this year? Here is a man who talks out in meeting with force and color, and, if need be, righteous anger. Can he be saving his thunder for 1932?

* * *

Next to Glass and Reed the most heated speech, ever to reach these ears, came not from a political speaker, but from the lips of Babe Ruth. Without benefit of notes, the Sultan of Swat aimed his scorn at those, who, from the shelter of the bleachers, resent his occasional failures at the bat with choice and colorful profanity.

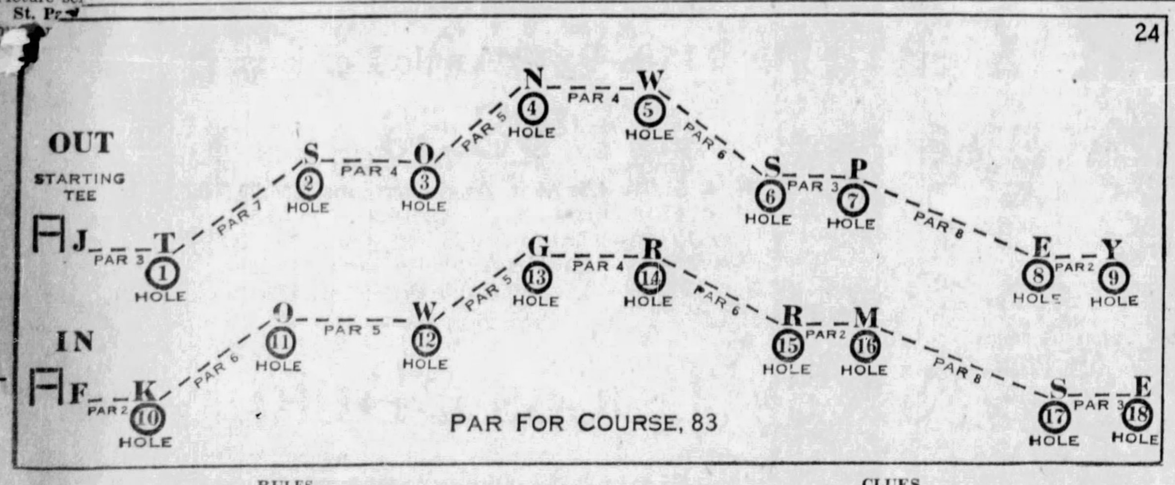
PENCIL GOLF



RULES

Proper nouns, slang and words that offend good taste cannot be used. SCORING: The first and last letters of each word do not count as strokes. A longer or shorter word can be substituted, but at a penalty. If a longer word is used, each letter above par counts as a stroke; if a shorter word is used, each letter below par as a stroke. If player cannot insert a suitable word, add 3 to par for hole and proceed to next hole.

The solution to this puzzle can be found on page 12.

Stabbing Follows Insult to Waitress

Two men were held in Central Police Station today following a fight in a restaurant in Fifth avenue.

Stanley Smith, of 737 Locust street, seized Mike Devalos, of 703 Wylie avenue, when the latter insulted a waitress, according to police. Devalos grabbed a large knife and stabbed Smith, police said. Smith was taken to Mercy Hospital and then to the police station. Wagonman Thomas Cox and Joseph Voegler later arrested Devalos.

Police Seek Thief Who Robs Jobless

Henry Hartman, 25, of 104 Seel street, Etna, advertised for the position of chauffeur. The thief read the ad and a meeting was arranged yesterday. The "employer" asked Hartman to accompany him to a store. There, the man, explaining that he was without change to make a purchase, asked Hartman to lend him some cash. The job-seeker handed the man $7. When he failed to return, Hartman notified detectives.

KDKA PREPARES FOR BIRTHDAY

Radio broadcasting will complete its tenth milestone tomorrow. To commemorate the event, KDKA will broadcast a special program at 5:30, featuring a reproduction of the first broadcast on November 2, 1920, when the Harding-Cox election returns were given to the public.

Part of the first boxing bout to be broadcast will be reproduced. Tribute will be paid to Dr. H. P. Davis, Dr. Frank Conrad and J. C. McQuiston, three gentlemen who have been actively engaged in radio since the beginning. Musical units that played frequently in the early days will furnish background for the program. These include the Westinghouse Band, Westinghouse Community Chorus, Little Symphony Orchestra.

WCAE will pay tribute to KDKA in a special program over KDKA at 10:30 tomorrow night. WCAE musical talent will participate and Jesse L. Kaufman will deliver congratulations to "The Pioneer."

91 Pennsy Workers Retired on Pensions

Ninety-one employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be retired on pensions tomorrow, officials announced. Of this number 45 have been in the employ of the company 40 years or more, and six have 50 years to their credit. All but seven have had 30 or more years experience.

N. Y. Jury Indicts 259 in Vote Scandal

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Three grand juries ended their investigation into illegal registration of voters with the indictment of 259 persons and a presentment declaring false registration is an equal in Manhattan as to constitute "a serious menace to fair and impartial elections."

The authorities are keeping secret the names of those indicted because it is feared the guilty ones would escape arrest by staying away from the polls, as happened in previous years.

WHY LEADING REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPERS ARE SUPPORTING JOHN M. HEMPHILL

The Post-Gazette will support John M. Hemphill for Governor of Pennsylvania in the present campaign because it is in full agreement with him on the major issues at stake.

Mr. Hemphill recognizes the serious problems that have grown up with prohibition, including wide disrespect for law, corruption in public life and growing crime with a reckless underworld financed by bootleg money. He will seek a change in the present law, and his election would have tremendous moral effect throughout the nation as indicating the power of the liberal revolt in this State. On the other hand, Mr. Pinchot has given no indication that he has altered his fanatical dry views in the slightest.

Mr. Hemphill urges a modification of the antiquated blue laws to conform with modern conditions and give the poor equal opportunities with the rich for healthful and non-commercial recreation. Mr. Pinchot is against any change.

Western Pennsylvania is determined to rid itself of the obnoxious Coal and Iron police system. Mr. Hemphill pledges himself to do just that and would recommend repeal of the law that permits the State to delegate its sovereign police power to private hands. Mr. Pinchot is not willing to go that far and proposes a compromise of doubtful legality whereby Coal and Iron police officers would be taken over by the State and their salaries assessed against the companies. Though under nominal State control, they would still be subject to strong company influence. The one sure way to eliminate the evils of the system is to go the whole way and wipe it off the books.

Mr. Hemphill promises the strengthening of the Public Service Commission and extension of its powers. Mr. Pinchot would abolish it and substitute a Fair Rate board with similar jurisdiction. Both recognize the need of a strong regulatory body; the name by which it is known is of little consequence. The only important change in Mr. Pinchot's proposal is that the members be elected instead of appointed by the Governor. With primary nominations for such offices dictated by the political bosses of Allegheny, Philadelphia and other key counties—as experience has shown them to be—what reason is there to expect a better type than when named by a Governor who must accept responsibility? The Federal judiciary, which is appointed by the President, ranks as high or higher than any elective state judiciary in the country. Mr. Pinchot's quarrel with the Public Service Commission is chiefly with members he named himself.

When Governor, Mr. Pinchot was the first executive in many years to drag politics into the school system. That brought formal censure from the National Educational Association and was resented by every sincere and devoted educator in the State. It drove several of the highest principled educators from the State Council of Education. Pennsylvania wants no repetition of that.

The same can be said of the Game Commission. His dictation of political appointments to that body which had built constructively without political interference for many years forced the resignations of several of the most capable members of the Board. As stated by one of them at the time, the birds and fish of the State were traded for votes.

Pinchot's claim that Republicans must support him is ridiculous. Pinchot has never been loyal to the Republican party. He has simply been loyal to himself and ever thinking of Pinchot and Pinchotism.

Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Philadelphia "Public Ledger", the "Evening Ledger", and the Philadelphia "Inquirer", as well as the "Saturday Evening Post", in a public statement on Tuesday, October 21, declared:

"My objection to Pinchot is that he has always been a trouble maker. He created trouble between Presidents Roosevelt and Taft. He created trouble in 1926 when he issued the certificate of doubt to Senator Vare. Pinchot never was a Republican. He plays with the radical elements of the Republican party.

Over his own signature he denies his Republicanism and then yells for party regularity. I will not vote for him."

COUNTY BUREAU PUSHES PUBLIC WORKS

Progress Made Results In Rapid Development Of Outlying Districts

By JAMES B. SANSOM,
Secretary, Allegheny County Planning Commission.

The advancement of Allegheny County to leadership among the municipalities of the United States in the matter of progress and the development of public improvements and facilities is the outstanding accomplishment of the present Board of County Commissioners, under the leadership of Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong. The progress that has been made along the line of meeting the demand for new public facilities has been so great that the county has been brought almost from the last of the procession to the very head, and the result is the rapid development of rural sections of the county into high class residential districts and added inducements to interest new industries which furnish employment for the people.

In addition to the great system of boulevards and highways which have been constructed within the past few years, Allegheny County has more than 700 miles of county roads previously built which must be resurfaced and maintained and in many cases practically reconstructed by widening and curve eliminations; it has hundreds of bridges varying in size from the culverts over small streams to the gigantic bridges spanning the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio rivers, all of which have to be taken care of, refloored and in many cases almost rebuilt. Public buildings have had to be moved, extended and improved in many ways.

ELIMINATES UNITS

Previous to the formation of the Department of Public Works there were a host of small organizations each with a superintendent to take care of public properties and improvements of this sort, now it is done by a department which has provided itself with the most modern facilities for doing the work at the least cost. This organization might be divided into two groups, one of which deals largely with new work and the other with maintenance and repair. The technical engineering work of the Planning Commission is done under the supervision of the director of public works, who has been given a free hand by the County Commissioners in selecting competent engineers, architects, etc., all through his department without relation to political influence.

BUREAUS SET UP

Once the preliminary plans and location of public improvements are decided upon and the County Commissioners have approved of the same, it reaches the constructive stage in which there have been set up eight major bureaus; bureau of bridges, headed by a competent chief engineer with a principal assistant engineer and his subordinates and an office division; bureau of roads, in which are centralized the construction and maintenance of county roads; bureau of tests and specifications, with a laboratory which prepares specifications, makes all inspections of material, and analyzes and test the same, and selects and inspects machinery and equipment for the entire department, under the direction of a competent chief engineer; bureau of architecture, which prepares architectural designs and plans for new bridges and buildings and for alterations of old buildings and supervises construction; bureau of county property and buildings, which is custodian for the storing and safeguarding of material, cleaning and the upkeep as well as minor repairs under the direction of a competent superintendent; bureau of accounts which attends to the general accounting, preparation of the budget, appropriations and payrolls, checks availability and status of department funds and all contract funds; two other bureaus in the department not completely organized, although set up in the skeleton form of the department, the bureau of aviation, which has prepared the plans for and supervised the construction of the county airport and will probably have its functions extended to operation on the completion of the airport when put in service, and the bureau of town hall, which has not begun functioning as an executive unit of the department and will not do so until the actual construction of the Town Hall is undertaken.

Mesta Machine Common Has High Yield

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

IN ANALYZING the position of the stocks of Pittsburgh companies after a year of the bear market, attention is naturally directed to Mesta Machine common. While a few companies have been able to maintain earnings at a level equal to last year, Mesta's results for 1930 are particularly impressive. Net profit for the present year will exceed 1929 by a large margin.

Benefiting from large orders for equipment for steel mills the company has been operating practically at capacity for the entire year and has orders on its books which will keep plants busy through the first quarter of 1931.

The common stock was placed on a $2 annual dividend basis last August with a declaration of 50 cents a share payable on October 1. Previously quarterly dividends of 40 cents a share had been paid. Extras of 10 cents a share accompanied the April 1 and July 1 payments.

Yields Over 8 Per Cent

AT THE PRESENT price of about 24 a share the common yields 8.3 per cent. The $2 dividend requirements for a full year were earned in the first half of 1930. Net profit for the period was $1,271,000 which was equivalent to $2.03 a share on 600,000 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends. No official estimate has been made of earnings for the second half of the year but the fact that production has continued at a high rate indicates that the results of the first six months will be duplicated.

Mesta's profits for 1930 will exceed those of 1929 when $1,797,242 or $2.81 a share on the basis of the present capitalization was reported. In 1928 net profit was $1,051,473 or $1.56 a share and in 1927 net was $1,227,699 or 1.94 a share. While recently placed orders have not been in large volume the improvement projects under consideration by steel companies indicate that there will be a good demand for rolling mill machinery in 1931. This makes the prospects for next year's earnings quite satisfactory.

Sells at 9.3 Times Earnings

THE AVERAGE net profit per share for the three years ended with 1929 was $2.10. At 24 the stock is selling for 11.4 times earnings. In 1930 profit is estimated at $4 a share, the average for the four years would be $2.58 a share. On this basis the stock is selling for 9.3 times earnings.

The company has no funded debt. The issue of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock amounted to only $1,721,500 at the close of 1929. Part of this has since been retired.

A strong financial position gives the company fortification against any emergency. Current assets of $4,001,174 were 4.5 times current liabilities at the close of 1929. Cash of $2,358,957 was 2.5 times all current liabilities of $899,416.

Total assets amounted to $11,971,164 and surplus was $3,255,164 at the close of 1929.

Changes which are constantly taking place in steel mill practice indicate that the future of the organizations supplying rolling mill machinery will be bright. In spite of the large expenditures for modernization of steel mills in recent years, many companies are still operating equipment which is obsolete when judged by present standards.

Record Movement Of Salmon Reported

SEATTLE, Nov. 1.—The greatest movement of salmon on in history was completed in the 1930 season which closed October 1, when approximately 5,000,000 cases were handled, Associated Salmon Packers reports. This figure comprises about 65 per cent of the total salmon pack.

The association has voted to continue its co-operative advertising campaign in 1931, the second year of a three year campaign, involving an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000.

STATE LIFTS 5 ROAD DETOURS

The Pittsburgh Motor Club today announced removal by the state highway department of five detours of interest to autoists here. Three ane one-half miles of new construction on Route 51 to Uniontown between the Saw Mill Run boulevard and the South Hills Country Club has been opened.

Other detours removed were those on Route 422 near the Ohio state line; on Route 208 from Butler to St. Petersburg; U. S. Route 220 from Maryland border to the New York border, and one between Lock Haven and Jersey Shore. A detour four miles long has been placed between Smock and Waltersburg on Route 51.

WINDOW GLASS DEMAND IS STRONGER

Continued Improvement in November Expected; Plate Output Gains

Distribution of window glass is in some better volume and with the advent of November, normally the busiest month of the year, should continue to show improvement, according to American Glass Review. In the market for plate glass relative quiet held sway this week, although conditions in this branch are likewise more favorable than a month ago.

Despite the somewhat strengthened position of window glass, the market for this commodity is spotty. Rather pronounced activity during the week in some sections was offset in part by a dearth of orders from other parts of the country. Throughout October, as a matter of fact, the tendency has been decidedly in evidence, with considerable fluctuation in the week-to-week change in demand.

Production of window glass is holding at around the same level as a month ago, with all present indications that demand the remainder of the year will hardly justify increasing factory operating schedules to any extent. Shipments by the manufacturers, as for some weeks past, are running somewhat in excess of production.

Practically no improvement was to be noted this week in either shipments or sales of plate glass, although this product is in better movement than at the outset of October. Production this past month is believed to have been only slightly in excess of September, when approximately 7,979,000 square feet were produced.

In the rough rolled and wire glass field the demand has shown a seasonal increase, with production of these products considerably below the average for this time of year.

Warner's Financial Position Is Good

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The current financial position of Warner Brothers Pictures is satisfactory with cash on hand of more than $5,000,000, while bank loans are only $2,500,000. Total current assets are more than twice current liabilities.

Operations are recovering to a more normal basis following the slump in profits which started last May. The annual report will be published in the first part of November.

Bank Leaders More Helpful Than Realized

By B. C. FORBES

SAID ONE of America's best known bankers yesterday:

"I don't think you are entirely fair in what you have been saying lately about the utter lack of leadership. We have not been as hopelessly and helplessly idle as you seem to think."

B. C. Forbes

"Neither I nor the public have seen any convincing demonstration that you bank leaders have been doing much to mend conditions," I replied.

"If you knew more about what has actually been done, you would feel differently," he came back. "The trouble is that much of the constructive work which has been done can't be talked about in public. I can assure you, however, that, could the whole record be made known, you would modify your criticism.

"You should know that, after the kind of times we have gone through, there have developed from time to time situations which called for very careful handling. If the banks had been entirely selfish, entirely indifferent, some of these unpleasant situations would have come to the surface and caused more disturbance. While I don't want for a moment to say that every bank in every instance has done everything it might have done, I can say, and do say, that far more really helpful work has been done by the banks than is generally appreciated. Some day soon I would like to sit down with you and give you an account of just what has been accomplished, because I feel it is very unfortunate that you should continue to publish comments which I know you would not publish if you were in possession of all the facts."

I mentioned that in one very large city leading men of affairs recently got together and arranged to take steps to prevent various high-grade local stocks from plunging to still more ridiculously low levels.

"Heavens!" he ejaculated, "you surely don't expect anybody in New York to try to sweep back the Atlantic Ocean? Common sense should tell you that the New York stock market has become far too big an affair for any group of men to control it. To attempt to do so would be sheer folly because it simply could not be done. There is no power on earth that could stand up and take all the stock the country's fifteen million stockholders might care to dump on the market.

"The idea that 'Wall Street banks' could send a market up or down at will is childish. All that was aimed at last fall, when the panic broke out, was to maintain some semblance of an orderly, open market. There was no thought of pegging or controlling quotations for the many hundreds of issues listed on the New York stock exchange, the curb exchange, and elsewhere."

It will interest you to know that this banker spoke hopefully of the general situation as it exists now. Apparently most of the weak spots have already either been cured or have already come to the surface. Presumably, therefore, better foundations have been laid for improving conditions.

P. F. CUSICK, head of his New York Stock Exchange firm, returning from a visit to his old home town, Scranton, Pa., brings this cheering news:

"The leading coal companies, which prior to the cold snap were working three or four days a week, now are working full time and expect to continue through the winter. Resumed activity in the silk business more than any one factor is responsible for the recent employment of hundreds of people in Scranton and throughout the valley.

"Scranton is one of the big silk centers of the country—its scores of mills employ thousands of people. Silk mills closed all summer have been reopened and are again beehives of industry. At the Sanquoit mill, the largest throwing mill in the country under one building, the day force of 1,200 employes is not only working to capacity, but a night force of approximately 300 has been added. General Manager J. Edward Havey has leased the George Frisbee mill, where 200 additional employes have been put to work. At other mills throughout the valley similar activity is reported."

FROM FENNER & BEANE, far-flung Southern stock and cotton brokers, comes to this column a letter written on cotton cloth. The cost is described as "ridiculously low." This is better than any "buy a bale of cotton" propaganda.

Another concern sends a "crying towel,' with this injunction printed thereon:

"The next bozo who comes weeping to you crying 'bad business,' hand him this towel, direct him to a quiet corner and tell him the advantages of buying now!"

Is it not high time to stop weeping on every shoulder that comes along?

CARNEY URGES EDUCATION OF RETAILERS

Cleveland Convention Told Ice Cream Industry Is Just Starting to Grow

The importance of educating retailers in all types of business was stressed by Peter P. Carney, director of sales and advertising for the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation, in an address before the international convention of ice cream manufacturers at Cleveland.

It is necessary to show dealers how to be better merchants, to show them better methods of accounting and to budget departments, he declared. The ice cream industry has just started to grow, and its greatest development will come when this type of program is fully under way. Pointing to the fact that this idea is not entirely new, Carney stated that one of the largest automobile concerns is doing this for its dealers, as is the largest clothing firm and one of the leading hardware manufacturers.

METHODS EXPLAINED

In speaking of accounting methods in the ice cream industry, Carney emphasized the importance of daily reports to the sales manager from each salesman, as well as from other departments whose work is closely affiliated.

He stated that the day of hit-and-miss campaigns is over and that everything in sales work must be carefully planned. To do this it is necessary for the sales manager to have complete information on every activity of his organization.

TRADE IN LATIN COUNTRIES OFF

Reports from Latin-American countries continue unencouraging. In Argentina, business was quiet in spite of favorable weather conditions for agriculture and livestock, and the depreciation of the peso acted as a further deterrent to import trade. Business in Brazil has been at a practical standstill throughout all of October. In Chile, seasonal recovery has been retarded by unfavorable weather and there has been a further decline in wholesale and retail sales. Dullness is unrelieved in Bolivia. A slight change for the better has occurred in Ecuador on account of higher coffee prices.

The usual seasonal upturn is not apparent in Uruguay, but imports during October were more active than in September. The only hopeful factor in Colombia is the prevalence of slightly more optimistic sentiment and there has been no gain of any kind in Venezuela. In Central American countries no definite improvement is discernable, but merchandise stocks are being gradually reduced. Low prices for the export products of Trinidad prevent any strengthening of economic conditions there. Improved collections and easier money have benefitted the outlook in Jamaica, and there has been a slight seasonal improvement in Haiti, although general conditions are still unsatisfactory. The strengthening of raw sugar prices has been a favorable factor in Cuba, but the usual pre-election lull still prevails. Crop movements and the somewhat better prices have helped Porto Rican business to approach normal conditions.

Use of Copper Declines in Quarter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Bureau of Metal Statistics estimates consumption of copper in third quarter in three of domestic copper-consuming industries as 53,000 short tons for electrical manufacture, 18,000 tons in the automobile industry and 11,000 tons for building. This compares with 68,000, 35,000 and 16,500 tons, respectively, for third quarter of 1929 and 54,000, 35,000 and 18,500 tons in third quarter of 1928. Copper consumed in manufactures for exports are placed at 18,600 tons in third quarter of 1930, compared with 17,800 and 16,200 tons in third quarter of 1929 and 1928, respectively.

BANK DEBITS INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—For the week ended October 25, 1930, bank debits, outside New York City, showed an increase over the week ended October 18, but declined from the corresponding period in 1929. Total loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks, although showing a fractional change from the preceding week, were lower than a year ago. Interest rates, both for call and time money, while showing no change from a week ago were considerably lower than last year. Prices for representative stocks and bonds were lower than the week ended October 18. As compared with a year ago, stock prices declined, while bond prices increased. The number of defaulting firms during the past week were more numerous than the previous period.

Packard-Pittsburgh Reports Big Profit

The Packard Motor Company of Pittsburgh reports net income of $141,197 for the first nine months of 1930, after setting up ample reserves for income tax, depreciation, bad debts, and bonuses to employes.

This is equal to $28 per share on the 5,000 shares of outstanding common stock, compared with $42 per share for the corresponding period of 1929.

The company's inventory shows only $19,000 invested in used cars, most of which are Packard cars.

STEEL OUTPUT SLIPS DURING WEEK

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel production has slipped a trifle in the past week. With operations practically unchanged in the Pittsburgh district, the Youngstown district is reported up one point and the Chicago district down a couple points, with some slight losses elsewhere. Ingot production is now at a shade under 50 per cent of present capacity, though perhaps a trifle above the official ascertainment of January 1.

August production was a shade above July and since August the decrease has been almost continuous, amounting altogether to fully 10 per cent. Naturally the trend will be somewhat downward this month and next on account of weather influences and rigid curtailment of stocks of steel and manufactures of steel all down the line, for January 1 inventory. The two influences are so strong that it will be virtually impossible for production to avoid an upward rebound immediately after January 1 and this is strictly in keeping with precedents made in both bad times and good.

PRICES FACTOR

No prediction can be hazarded as to how much increase there will then be. Something will depend on the state of general trade, which is not at all likely to change rapidly, and much will depend on the state of the steel market as to price firmness.

There has lately been a strong call upon sellers to follow a more rational price policy. It is too early to expect results to work out into the open market, and meanwhile a few fresh slips are to be reported, occurring by way of cutting starting a fortnight or more ago and gradually working out into general market quotations. Black sheets are now quotable at 2.35c to 2.45c, with perhaps an emphasis on the lower figure, against 2.45c, subject to some shading, formerly quoted.

MOTOR DEMAND

Other descriptions of sheets are easier, galvanized being not above 3.00c, with blue annealed easier. Wire nails are now commonly at $1.95 to the jobbing trade against $2. It should be noted that the list set up three years ago puts 20-penny and heavier nails at 25 cents a keg over base, whereas formerly they were at base. Bars are now at 1.60c for mixed carloads, unless too badly mixed, but there is no indication of much shading on larger orders. Plates and shapes, on the other hand, while commonly quoted at 1.60c as the general market, are frequently shaded quite deeply on large structural jobs. This cutting is not of recent origin, but it may be more widespread now, and there is danger of its leading to a substantial decline in the open market.

In a general way, the automobile industry continues its seasonal tapering off in activity. Fairly heavy Chevrolet production is expected, stocking dealers with a new model, but decreases elsewhere will probably offset. The industry is taking so little steel that variations in production do not count much in steel as a whole.

Gillette Directors Deny Court Charge

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—Denial of the charges made in a bill in equity filed in Supreme Court by minority stockholders that directors of Gillette Safety Razor Company profited by sales of stock was made by the directors in a public statement. "The individual directors have suffered a heavy personal loss in the matter," said the statement.

Other allegations contained in the bill were denied by the directors, who promised that answers to the bill would be filed in court setting forth fully the facts.

Banks Encourage Purchase of Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Large banks, interested in the cotton textile industry both in the South and the North, have sent letters to the cotton mills voluntarily offering to finance large purchases of raw cotton at the present time. While saying that they do not undertake to act as market forecasters, the banks suggest strongly that now is the time to obtain cotton at low prices, and they state that if the mills hold the same belief they are willing to finance the purchases at low interest rates and favorable terms as to the time for the loans and their extension.

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS LOWER

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—As we near the end of October, when activity is usually at its fall peak, it becomes clearer that business this year has failed to respond in full measure even to the usual seasonal expectations, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

This is more clearly evident in primary production and distribution than in general trade, which still appears to be moving on and up to its holiday high point. The preliminary business index for the week ending October 25 fell further, from 84.3 per cent to 83.2 per cent of normal, a new low level in the current recession, reflecting relative slackening in steel, and electric power production, merchandise carloadings and building contracting. In the same week a year ago, the index settled at 101.6 per cent.

The sustained strength of residential building, especially in the New York metropolitan area, relative improvement in railroad earnings, steady reduction of stocks of staple cotton and wool textiles and lumber, continued stability of commodity prices are moderately bullish portents of recuperation. There is a bare possibility that November and December will make a better than seasonal showing or at least more favorable comparisons with last year than heretofore.

EARN FREEPORT DIVIDEND

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Third quarter earnings of Freeport Texas Company were in excess of the quarterly dividend of $1.00 a share on the capital stock, Eugene L. Norton, president, reported.

Directors of the company have authorized two changes in company's accounting system, which have been approved by the New York Stock Exchange, as a result of which the company's fiscal year now ending on November 30 has been changed to end on December 31, and future reports to stockholders will be made semi-annually instead of quarterly. The latter change was adopted because of the fact that the company's contract with the Texas Company for the production of sulphur at Hoskins Mound, Tex., calls for an accounting every six months. Because of this and the fact that company's shipments are from two separately operated deposits, earnings statements heretofore made quarterly necessarily had to be partially based on arbitrary adjustments, Mr. Norton stated.

Domestic sales of sulphur for the 10 months ended September 30 were ahead of those for the same period of 1929, while foreign sales, although less than those of last year, are showing improvement, Mr. Norton reported.

SLIGHT TRADE REVIVAL NOTED

Department Store Sales Increase; Building Material Prices Low

A slight revival in business is noted in some lines, but the volume as a whole continues materially below normal, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Department store sales have been stimulated by more seasonable weather and extensive advertising, but jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, shoes and furnishing goods report buying mostly in small amounts, and largely for filling-in purposes. It is a general impression that retailers' stocks are comparatively low.

The leather trade continues quiet and prices are reported lower. There has been a slight increase in the demand for jewelry, although the volume of business continues well below normal. There has been no particular improvement in the demand for building materials, with the movement of lumber rather light, and prices continuing low. There is a slight increase in the demand for groceries and provisions, and also for confectionery.

OIL PRICES CUT

Not much change is noted in the demand for electrical fixtures, in which line business continues well below normal, but the demand for radio equipment is showing a moderate increase. A slight improvement is noted in the demand for plumbing supplies and heating equipment.

There has been a slight decrease in the production of crude oil and prices paid in several districts have been reduced to some extent. Production of bituminous coal shows comparatively little change, with the average about 15 per cent lower than a year ago at this time. Improvement in demand for domestic sizes is in evidence, but industrial demand continues light and over-production of slack is in evidence. While slowness continues to predominate in the reports received from local jobbers. The collection situation shows a slight improvement over that prevailing a few weeks ago.

American Radiator's Cut In Dividend Surprises Wall Street

Reduction in American Radiator's dividend came as a surprise to many in the financial district, and still is a subject of considerable comment. The popular opinion had been that no change would be made in the payment because of indications of a turn for the better in the building industry and the strong financial position of American Radiator. In some quarters, it is reported that the establishment of a $1 a share annual basis was in the nature of a compromise between interests that desired to maintain the previous rate and those that urged more drastic action.

The market has lost quite a number of friends in the past two sessions. Its failure to break through the resistance levels indicated at the top of the first automatic rally last week and its subsequent decline, has placed the general list in as uncertain a position as ever. It appears already evident it remains impossible to attract any important outside following for an advance beyond minimum technical proportions. Unless aggressive leadership makes its appearance, it is doubtful if any extensive recovery can be recorded.

Many still talk about the November, 1929, panic, but after comparing some of the present prices with the lows of last November, one might reach the conclusion that we had gone through an even more severe panic. Such a conclusion would have some basis in fact. It has been what some might term a creeping panic, with the prices of many stocks edging off week after week until they now make the November, 1929, lows look high in comparison.

Although news affecting the oil shares has not been favorable recently, a rather steady demand has developed at times in Standard Oil of New York. At the current dividend rate of $1.60 a share, the return has been slightly under 6%. Official information is lacking, of course, but buyers have contended that the dividend can be considered reasonably safe and may be covered by earnings in this year of oil difficulties. One report has it that the company has been buying considerable of its crude oil requirements and conserving its own.

Jones & Laughlin is one of the oldest steel companies in the country, and one of the best managed. It has a habit of making comparatively good showings in periods of depression. Deficits are almost unknown to it. For the first nine months of the current year, it was able to show a surplus of $3,565,000 after payment of $3,082,480 on the preferred stock and $2,161,200 on the common. For the third quarter, J. & L. earned its dividends by a margin of $103,000, which is a good showing for a steel company in that period of low operations and poor prices. Incidentally, Jones & Laughlin earned its preferred dividend almost three times over in the nine months. The stock sells around $122, pays $7 annually and is callable at 120 a share.

With completion of International Nickel Company's program of mine development and plant expansion, increasing its capacity beyond immediate requirements of customers, the company has dismissed 500 to 600 employes, bringing the total to about 5,000 in Subury district. The Frood mine, currently producing 4,000 tons of ore daily, will be reduced to around 3,000 tons, and the Creighton, producing 50,000 tons a day, will have further reductions. One of the four new refinery furnaces operated at Copper Cliff will be closed down also. The staff also has been reduced at plant of Ontario Refining Company.

Car Makers Receive Orders

St. Louis Car Company has received an order for 1,000 steel cars from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and 10 cement cars from Hercules Company.

Pressed Steel Car Company has received an order for 20 gondola cars from Wheeling Steel Corporation and American Car and Foundry Company 15 underframes from Illinois Terminal Railroad.

COLUMBIAN GAS PRODUCTION EXPANDS

Carbon Company's Capacity Remains Untested Due to General Trade Let-Down

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Columbian Carbon Company's estimate of its output for 1930 shows an increase in gasoline and natural gas but a decrease in carbon black and other pigments from 1929. Its gasoline output is placed at 45,000,000 gallons this year, against 26,179,539 gallons in 1929. Production of natural gas is estimated at 49,000,000,000 cubic feet, with sales of 32,000,000,000 cubic feet, in comparison with 47,831,160,000 cubic feet and 26,934,903,000 cubic feet, respectively, last year.

SHARES IN BIG LINE

Although Columbian Carbon is producing and selling more natural gas this year than ever before in its history, the large volume anticipated has not as yet materialized owing to the general curtailment in industry. The big natural gas line of Continental Construction Company, in which Columbian holds an interest, will not be completed until about midsummer of 1931, extending from the Panhandle gas area in Texas in Chicago and other points of large consumption.

EARNINGS LOWER

Prevailing low prices and curtailed demand have affected earnings of the company this year. The third quarter statement is likely to show reduced income from the second quarter, when net was $783,175 after federal taxes, depreciation, depletion and minority interest, equivalent to $1.57 a share on 498,505 shares of no-par capital stock. The six months' net was $1,593,180, or $3.19 a share, against $2,085,590, or $4.57 a share on 457,344 shares outstanding, in the first half of 1929.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

The last quarter's dividend of $1.50, which included the usual extra of 25 cents and the regular quarterly payment of $1.25, has already been declared, making total dividends of $6 a share for the year. MARKET OPENS IRREGULARLY LOWER

Some Prominent Shares Supported at Start; Steel and Radio Advance

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The stock market opened irregularly lower today, although a few prominent shares were supported. General Motors, Radio, U. S. Steel, Woolworth and General Electric each opened ⅛ higher. Eastman and Auburn, however, dropped about 2½ points. Union Pacific 1¾ and American Can, Johns Manville and Case each lost 1. American Telephone opened off ⅝.

GEN'L MOTORS PROFIT OFF

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—General Motors Corporation reported net earnings for the third quarter of $25,470,697, equal to 53 cents per common share, against $70,988,025, or $1.58 a share in the corresponding period of 1929. In the June quarter the corporation earned $53,386,768, equal to $1.17 a share.

The September earnings brought the total for the nine months to $131,403,125 equal to $2.85 a share of common after deducting preferred dividends, against $226,648,335, or $4.96 a share in the comparable period of 1929.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the corporation, said "while earnings have declined due to perfectly evident and fully appreciated reasons, I believe the General Motors organization has established an operating record equal to and perhaps more outstanding than in previous years.

Cash, United States government and other marketable securities on September 30, last, amounted to $202,064,960, against $187,653,073 at the end of September, 1929. Working capital was 285,777,740, against $321,090,612. Inventories were $113,530,106, against $188,472,999 on December 31, last year.

Man Knocked from Bridge Sues Driver

Alleging an automobile knocked him, May 27, from his seat on the rail of a bridge across Big Sewickley Creek at Ambridge, throwing him to the bed of the creek, Peter Spelich, Ambridge, asked $50,000 damages for injuries in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the driver, Forest H. Minton, of Bousted street, Pittsburgh. The automobile, out of control, swerved across the pavement and struck him, breaking his leg, and he fell to the bed of the creek, fracturing several ribs, according to the suit.

Accused by Wife, Hinted Gun Suspect

Arrested on complaint of his wife for alleged abuse, Daniel McGarvey, 27, of Hamilton, O., later was believed to have been the motorist who thrust a shotgun into the face of a taxicab driver after the machines scraped at North avenue and Federal street, last night.

McGarvey was arrested shortly after Elmer Urschlin, of Itin street, the cab driver, told police of the incident. In McGarvey's automobile, found parked in front of 413 Taylor avenue, police said, they found a shotgun.

Sees Record Hawaii Sugar Production

HONOLULU, Nov. 1.—Hawaii's raw sugar production for the current year was estimated by Sugar Factors, Ltd., to total 927,252 tons, largest in the history of the territory. Next largest yields were 913,670 tons in 1919 and 904,040 in 1918.

McClintic-Marshall Silent on Deal

Officials of the McClintic-Marshall Company would make no comment when questioned concerning reports that the company will be consolidated with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

ZUKOR TELLS WHY FIRM PROSPERS

Progress Despite Slump Due to Economies and Gross Volume Increase

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Another of the threescore of corporations listed on the New York Stock Exchange which stubbornly refuses to pay attention to the depression, and which keeps increasing profits is the Paramount Publix Corporation. Perhaps an outstanding reason for this is Adolph Zukor.

However, when asked why his corporation was able to report larger net profits for the first nine months of 1930 than for the corresponding period in 1929, Mr. Zukor, president of the company modestly told me:

"The progress of our corporation this year during the period of general depression has been due to an increase in the gross volume of our business particularly in foreign fields, to certain operating economies which we have effected, and to the continued popularity of Paramount Pictures."

Richard Whitney, able new president of the New York Stock Exchange, adheres to the wise tradition that the stock exchange should be a neutral market place where buyers and sellers meet. Yet by nature, he is affirmative, and has an abiding faith in the future of this country. In a recent speech, he said:

"Certainly business corporations are in a sounder financial condition than they were during any prior period of depression."

COURAGE NEEDED

Calling on the new president, I asked him whether the strong balance sheet position of corporations would have any bearing on business recovery. He indicated that it would perhaps not be the decisive factor which would turn the scales, but felt that it would enable corporations to go ahead with forward buying when they thought conditions were ripe and, meantime, it would enable them to stand the gaff.

Asked what would turn the tides, Mr. Whitney replied:

"Courage—courage on the part of corporations to use their resources for forward buying, and courage on the part of the consumer public to buy instead of hoarding resources."

Samuel F. Streit, president of the Stock Clearing Corporation, affiliated with the Stock Exchange, sits in the crow's nest, and is able to view from a fine perspective what is going on marketwise underneath the surface. Mr. Streit is an outstanding brokerage technician. Asked what significance he perceived in recent transactions, Mr. Streit said that he was impressed with the volume of investment buying which comes in whenever stock prices get weak. He thought as much as $80,000,000 of stocks were taken out of the street in a week, largely by odd lot cash buyers.

MELLON GIVES VIEWS

In urging a Republican Congress to support President Hoover, Mr. Mellon broke his long silence concerning the business situation. Mr. Mellon, though not overoptimistic about the celerity of prospective business recovery, is inclined to think that the process may be quickened by savings and by the stimulus given by new industries and new inventions.

In spite of his widespread reputation as the greatest secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton, Mr. Mellon, for all his wealth, is a humble man. He tells his friends that the economic forces at work are so complicated that no one can place an exact time table on future phases of the business cycle. And yet professional forecasters are glibly selling their prophecies at $100 a year.

Going a little further in the direction of prophecy than usual Mr. Mellon pointed out:

"No one can make any predictions as to how long it will take our country to make the readjustment necessary in a time like this. But of one thing we can be certain: with our great internal organization, our vast resources, our unparalleled domestic buying and the indominable spirit of our people, we shall be among the first of all the nations to recover and to resume the onward march of progress."

This utterance is in line with President Hoover's observation in his address at Cleveland before the American Bankers Association to the effect that the United States, as in 1922, would probably lead the world in quickness of business recovery.

ALL TURN SALESMEN

Fighting conditions instead of accepting them, the Comfort Coal-Lumber Company turned its entire personnel into salesmen, and reports remarkable results. In unfolding the plan, the president of the company told employes:

"We have spent a great deal of thought on the problem of increasing our sales without increasing our sales force or sales expense. We finally decided to ask you all to help. Consider yourself, first, a sales person, and second, what you are actually employed for. We are going to try something new. We want every one in the Comfort company to create one sale a day."

Skeptics will say that not every one can resist the tides and promote sales. That is doubtless true, but meantime the energetic and the enterprising are able to strengthen their relative position in their field at the expense of those who lay down and wail about conditions.

'Advertise---Plug!' Is 'Biscuit's' Policy

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A. G. Dixler, vice president of the National Biscuit Company, is quoted in the current issue of Printer's Ink, in an article on "Weathering the Depression," as saying that in 32 years of national prosperity and depression the company has steadfastely pursued the same policies year after year. He said:

"We advertise steadily and generously. When money is scarce we work harder for our share of it. But we try not to forget that the rules of good business are fundamentally the same in the lean years as well as the years of plenty."

National reported an increase over 1929 for the third quarter, and declared an extra dividend.

Erie Elks Fined On Liquor Charge

George M. Lyle, secretary of Elks Lodge No. 67, Erie, was fined $100 and the lodge a like amount by Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court. Lyle pleaded guilty to possessing 12 half barrels of liquor and 148 bottles of ale and beer September 30.

BORG-WARNER EARNINGS LOWER

Second Half Net Sharply Curtailed by Recession In Automobile Industry

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Borg-Warner probably will close the current year with total net profits around $2,750,000, equal, after preferred dividends, to more than $2 a share on the 1,230,769 common shares outstanding. Such earnings would represent a decline of more than 60 per cent from the record profits of $7,682,590, or $6.03 a share, reported in 1929.

During the first half of 1930, business was maintained at levels which permitted substantial profits, although net income was considerably below the high record of 1929, in line with the reduced activity in the automobile industry.

POOR THIRD QUARTER

However, with the development of a more severe recession in automobile output during the summer months, net profits for the third quarter declined sharply to $198,834, equal to 10 cents a common share after preferred dividends, compared with $1,277,560, or 98 cents a share, in the preceding quarter and with $1,846,931, or $1.45 a share, in the third quarter of last year. The nine months' net was $2,574,205, or $1.92 a share, against $6,401,358, or $5.05, in 1929.

For the final three months of the year, it is likely that profits will approximate the third quarter results, with the possibility of some improvement on any seasonal advance in automobile manufacturing schedules prior to the end of the year.

DIVIDEND OUTLOOK

Last May, Borg-Warner reduced the annual dividend rate on the common stock to $3 a share from $4, or to the equivalent of $4.50 on stock outstanding prior to the 50 per cent stock dividend paid in August, 1929, at which time the cash rate was $4.

Because 1930 dividend payments have exceeded the nine months' income of $2,574,205 by $718,417, and profits since May have fallen below the present quarterly rate of 75 cents, it is likely that directors will further reduce the common dividend at their meeting in November, or will eliminate payments pending a general business revival.

American Bridge Opens Beam Shop

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Nov. 1.—The beam shop, built at a cost of $1,500,000, will be formally opened today by the American Bridge Company. William P. Martl has been transferred here from Canton, O., to be superintendent of the new plant. It was also announced the bridge company had been awarded a contract for 7,600 tons of fabricated steel to be used in a 30-story building in New York City.

Ardmore Boulevard Damages Approved

Sixteen claims for property damages on the Ardmore boulevard totaling $153,750 were approved yesterday by the county commissioners.

OBITUARY

Miss Irene Ruthledge.

Miss Irene Rutledge, 86, daughter of the late Eliza Brady and the Rev. Joshua Wells Rutledge, died Thursday night in the home of her niece, Mrs. William M. Stevenson, 1330 Denniston avenue. She was born in Philadelphia and she moved to Pittsburgh with her parents when a young woman. She entered the Pittsburgh Female College, graduating in the class of 1861. Soon after she became a teacher in the Moorhead School, and was engaged as a teacher in that school for 38 years. She was a member of the First Methodist Protestant Church and was a Sunday School teacher more than 50 years. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Sarah A. Bryant.

Patterson Funeral.

Funeral services for J. Boyd Patterson, 83, retired city policeman, who died yesterday, will be held at the home, 5619 Margaretta street, East End, tomorrow. Interment will be in Plum Creek Cemetery. He retired from the police department 17 years ago, after serving 20 years. He was a member of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church and the Police Pension Fund Association. Besides his widow he leaves a son, W. B. Patterson, of Chicago; two daughters, Mrs. J. G. Youngson and Miss June Patterson, and two brothers.

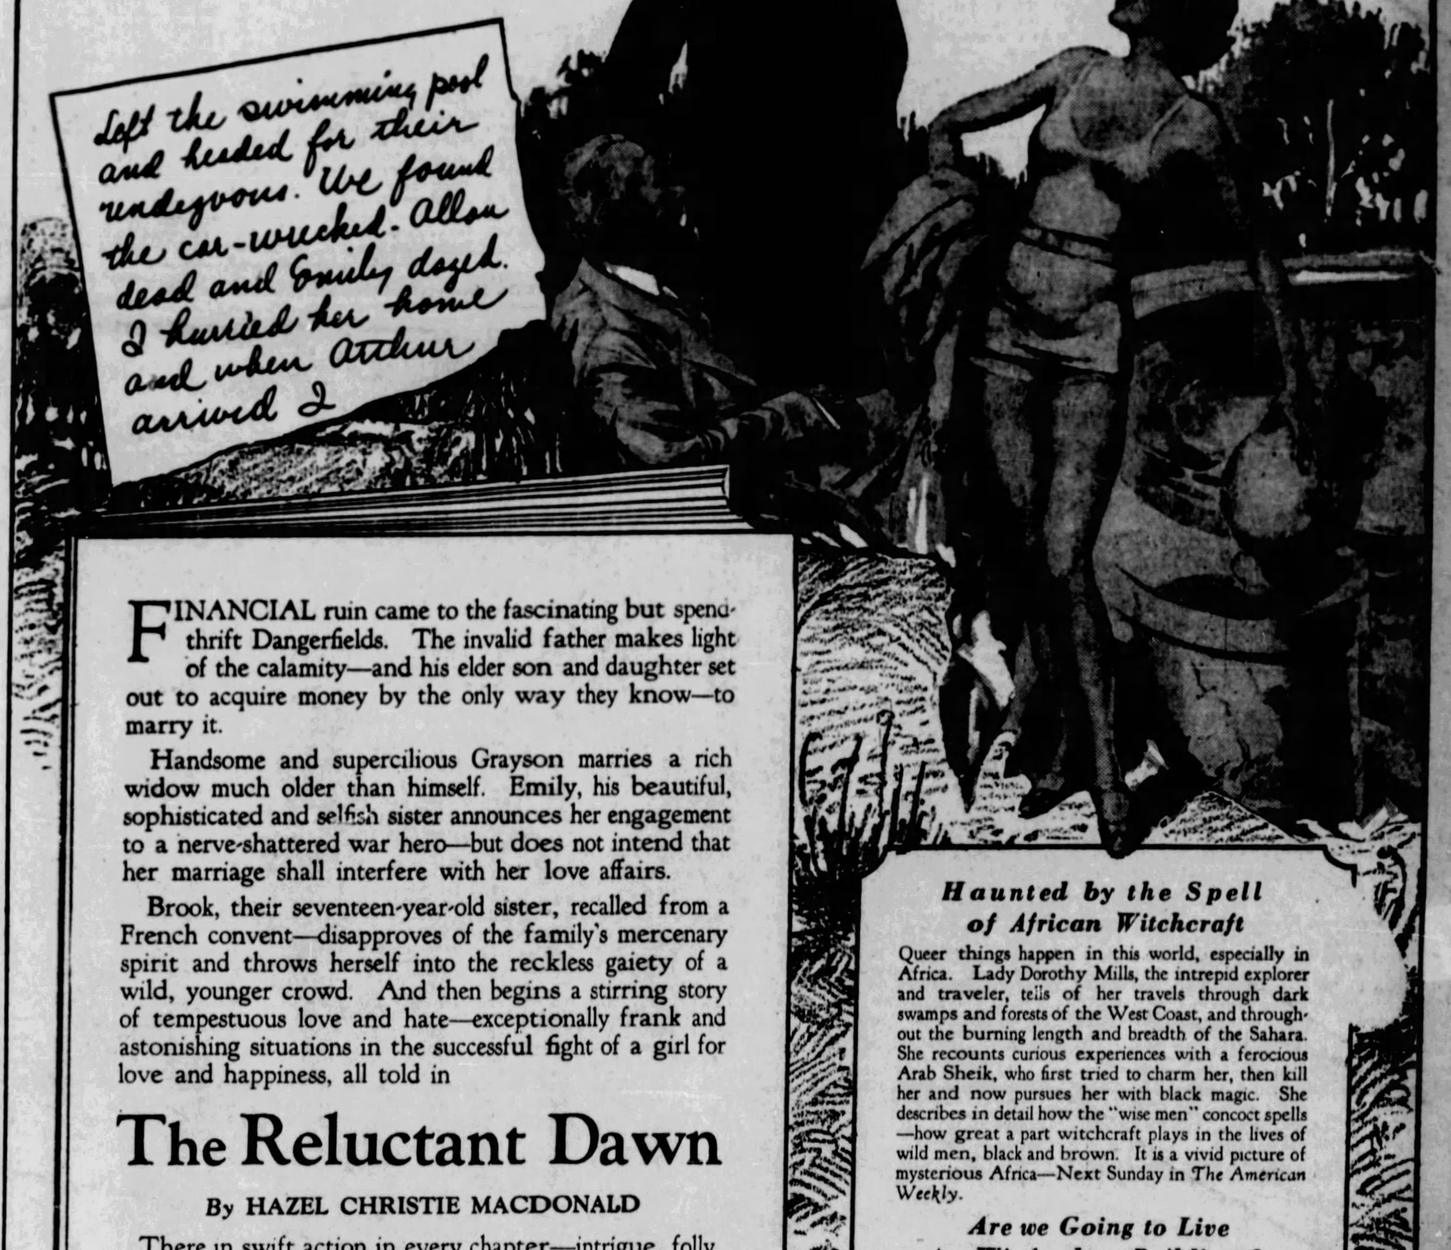
"You Will Be Sent To The 'Chair' Unless"



Left the swimming pool and headed for their rendezvous. We found the car wrecked. Allen dead and Emily dazed. I hurried her home and when Arthur arrived I

FINANCIAL ruin came to the fascinating but spendthrift Dangerfields. The invalid father makes light of the calamity—and his elder son and daughter set out to acquire money by the only way they know—to marry it.

Handsome and supercilious Grayson marries a rich widow much older than himself. Emily, his beautiful, sophisticated and selfish sister announces her engagement to a nerve-shattered war hero—but does not intend that her marriage shall interfere with her love affairs.

Brook, their seventeen-year-old sister, recalled from a French convent—disapproves of the family's mercenary spirit and throws herself into the reckless gaiety of a wild, younger crowd. And then begins a stirring story of tempestuous love and hate—exceptionally frank and astonishing situations in the successful fight of a girl for love and happiness, all told in

Haunted by the Spell of African Witchcraft

Queer things happen in this world, especially in Africa. Lady Dorothy Mills, the intrepid explorer and traveler, tells of her travels through dark swamps and forests of the West Coast, and throughout the burning length and breadth of the Sahara. She recounts curious experiences with a ferocious Arab Sheik, who first tried to charm her, then kill her and now pursues her with black magic. She describes in detail how the "wise men" concoct spells—how great a part witchcraft plays in the lives of wild men, black and brown. It is a vivid picture of mysterious Africa—Next Sunday in The American Weekly.

Are we Going to Live in Windowless Buildings?

Is the age of windowless buildings at hand? Far-seeing engineers and architects say that windows have become superflous for ventilation and illumination. Science points out that windows are useless and expensive—that purer air and more satisfactory light can now be artificially provided—even the "health rays" of sunshine. Science says that windows may be common in homes, but that they will disappear from office buildings, stores and factories. What do you think about it? Read the details next Sunday in The American Weekly.

BIG POISON TO STAY WITH PIRATES

REPEATED RUMORS FROM various points along the National League baseball front that Outfielder Paul Waner has been placed on the market by the Pittsburgh club bring an emphatic denial from Pirate headquarters. Naturally, as in the case of any other player, the Buccaneer bosses would be willing to listen to any trade proposals for Paul that promised to increase the strength of the local club. But that Big Poison has been offered in any sort of deal, or that any bids for his services have been invited, is declared to be wholly untrue. According to present plans and intentions, the punching gardener will be right back on his old job here next season.

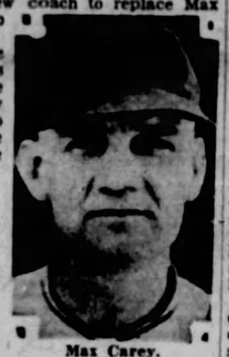
Paul Waner.

The latest chapter in the Waner story came from New York. Following the St. Louis report that Paul was to be sent to the Cardinals in exchange for Catcher Jimmy Wilson and Outfielder Chick Hafey, Gotham rumors said that would be only part of the dicker; that the Cards did not intend to keep Paul for their own use, but would pass him on to the Giants in a second deal in exchange for Third Baseman Freddie Lindstrom.

THERE MAY BE something to the report of a Giant-Cardinal swap. Rumors of strained relations between Manager John McGraw and Lindstrom and a possible decision to get rid of the latter have been strengthened by McGraw's action in buying Third Baseman Johnny Verges from Oakland at a fancy figure and in drafting Hugh Pickering, another infielder from Birmingham. It is also known that New York is seeking a stronger outfielder to replace Walter Roettger, sold to the Reds, and it is no secret that the Cards desire to trade Outfielder Taylor Douthit.

Though a great outfielder, Douthit does not represent as much hitting strength as Lindstrom, but it is said McGraw may be willing to make a deal for the Redbird flychaser rather than depend upon Eddie Roush, who is expected to return to the Giants in the spring. But whatever may be stirring, Paul Waner is not in it, according to Cermir officials. Vice President Sam Dreyfuss says no offer for him has been received from St. Louis or New York or any other club, and that no trade involving him has been suggested by the Pirate management. There is no thought here at present other than that Paul will continue to play right field for the Rovers.

FOR THE TIME being, Manager Jewel Ens has deferred taking any steps toward the acquisition of a new coach to replace Max Carey, one of his lieutenants in 1930, who has been given his release.



Max Carey.

The skipper has no one in view for the vacancy, but as his only remaining coach is Oscar Stanage, and peppery work on the lines is not the latter's forte, it is safe to say that Jewel will not allow the position to go unfilled. Another coach probably will be signed about the time of the big league meetings next month.

WHILE THE CLUB heads made no statement in connection with the release of Carey, other than to say that the management desired a change, it is not to be doubted that Carey proved considerable of a disappointment to them, in view of his long experience and reputation as a smart baseball man. One drawback in Max's case, as a baserunning coach, the same flaw that was largely the cause of Ty Cobb's failure as a manager, was that he made the mistake of thinking that the players whom he was directing should be able to do things on the paths as well as he had done them himself in his playing days, when he was the king of baserunners.

FOR EXAMPLE, CAREY was able to take an unusually long lead off first base and then get back in safety when the pitcher threw over to catch him. He coached the Pirate runners to take the same long lead, unmindful of the fact that they did not possess his knack of getting back, and the result was that more Buc runners were caught off first base than in any previous season.

It was simply a case in which Carey, like Cobb, did not realize there was anything exceptional in his own ability, and believed every other player could do the same thing. As a matter of fact, the ones who can do the things that Carey did on the bases are very few. Another item that probably did not strengthen Max's standing with the management was his action, while in charge of the Bucs on a side trip to Terre Haute, in pitching Charley Wood during the major part of an exhibition game despite the fact that that promising youngster was troubled with a sore arm. It did not look like good judgment to risk perhaps permanent injury to such a valuable pitching prospect in a game that meant nothing.

season at Forbes Field. In this thrilling battle, Strong, an all-America back, again was the villain, with his great broken field running. The game was further notable for the fact that the late Al Lassman, the giant tackle, suffered injuries and had to be carried from the field.

BROTHERS ON TEAMS

This fall finds the Violet lineup jammed with sophomore talent and Coach Meehan building for the future. Meanwhile Carnegie has a veteran team and one of its best.

Brother combinations will parade before the fans during the fray. Tech has Latham Flanagan as its regular right end, and Thayer Flanagan will be at right halfback in place of the injured George Kavel, the sophomore flash who beat him out of the starting post this season. For N. Y. U. there are the LaMark brothers, of Coraopolis, Joe, the regular quarterback, a sophomore, and Herman, a halfback and a junior. Herman also has been named as one of the starters. Another Western Pennsylvania product on the Violets' squad is light-haired Ernie Vavra, of Universal, former Turtle Creek Union High School star, who also is a crack baseball pitcher. Ernie plays a tackle, and while not in the starting lineup is a first-string reserve man.

KAVEL OUT OF LINEUP

With the exception of Kavel, Carnegie will be able to present its strongest lineup against the visitors. McCurdy at quarterback, Eyth at left half and Karcis at full will round out the backfield with T. Flanagan.

Kickoff is at 2 o'clock.

Coach Meehan's teams always are colorful and this year's edition will draw a good-sized crowd, as in 1928, the only other time N. Y. U. appeared here. A large army of N. Y. U. rooters has arrived in special cars and by automobile to cheer the invaders, establishing headquarters at Webster Hall. The Violet squad got in yesterday morning, and, after breakfast downtown, repaired to the Chartiers Heights Country Club, where the night was spent. A trip was made into town yesterday afternoon for a light workout at the Stadium.

The New York University Band of 80 pieces also is here for the occasion and will vie with the Carnegie Kiltie Band in whooping up things and entertaining the spectators.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 1.—For the first time in the three years the Pitt Panthers have been playing Nebraska's hefty Cornhuskers on their own back lot, fair skies and well-nigh perfect football weather was served up by the local weatherman as the Panthers and Huskers prepared for battle here today.

The team was taken to the Hotel Lincoln for a short rest and luncheon, after which it repaired to the Stadium and donned moleskins for the battle with Dana Bible's crimson and white clad team.

Betting odds on the game favored Pitt by 10 to 7 and better as game-tie approached, the dry field being figured to aid the chances of the Pittites over the heftier, but slower, Nebraska team.

CLARK AT FULLBACK

Coach Jack Sutherland, of Pitt, gave out a formal starting lineup on the train coming over from Omaha, it being the same he named yesterday following the workout of Fort Omaha. The Panthers will lineup for the kickoff in the same fashion that they faced Notre Dame last week, with the single exception that Jimmy Clark, the 160-pound mighty atom, will be at fullback instead of the bulky and slower Hood. Collins and MacMurdo are to go at the ends; Quatsie and the veteran Tully at the tackles; Ernie Lewis and Mikie Milligan at the guards, and Ralph Daugherty at center.

In the backfield, Eddie Baker will run the team and call the signals from quarterback, Josh Williams and Heller will serve at the halfbacks and Clark will be at full.

The advance sale of tickets for today's game, despite the fact that both the contesting elevens have been defeated, indicates a capacity crowd. Pitt has played before 40,000 or better here for the past two years and Nebraska authorities are looking forward to a 45,000 turnout today.

TULLY FEARED

Charley Tully, who has played all-American tackle here in two appearaances, is going to be watched closely today. It was Tully who stood between Pitt and defeat in the first period of last year's 12-7 game, and it was Tully who in 1928 stopped the great Blue Howell dead in his tracks as a weak and battered Pitt eleven held a powerful Husker array to a scoreless tie and kept it from making a first down or working the ball past its own 40-yard line.

In Pittsburgh, Tully is just another tackle. In Lincoln, he looks like the best in the world.

Funny guys, these linemen; like southpaws in baseball, you never can tell what they are likely to do.

MOUNTAINEERS FACE FORDHAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—When the Mountaineers from West Virginia line up against the undefeated and unscored-upon Rams from Fordham heights today they will be facing a weight handicap of six and five-elevenths pounds the man.

Ira Rodgers' Mountaineers will present a line the average weight of which will be 843-7 pounds, while Maj. Frank Cavanaugh's Fordham forward wall will weigh on the average of 1913-7 pounds. The West Virginia backfield average will be 170¼ pounds the man, while the Rams' quartet at the start will weigh 175¾ pounds the man. The probable lineups:

500,000 FANS TO SEE GAMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Half a million or more fans were intent on seeing Eastern football games today.

A half-dozen stellar attractions on the program accounted for more than 300,000 spectators. The Yale Bowl, with Yale and Dartmouth playing, was the magnet for 76,000. As many more fans in Philadelphia were attracted by the intersectional clash between Pennsylvania and Kansas.

Carnegie Tech and New York University counted on having about 50,000 to watch the renewal of their rivalry, while nearly as many more spectators at the battle between the powerful lines of Syracuse and Brown swelled the list.

Two undefeated teams, playing in New York, contributed 60,000 or more. Columbia was host to unbeaten Cornell, and mighty Fordham entertained West Virginia. Harvard drew thousands, although expecting no hard task with William and Mary.

ROCKNE PICKS PITT TEAM TO BEAT NEBRASKA

CHICAGO CHOICE OVER TIGER ELEVEN

By KNUTE ROCKNE

Knute Rockne

Several years ago, the clash between Chicago and Princeton was the outstanding contest of the day, if not of the year. You remember that great 21-to-18 battle. When these two teams meet today, however, it will just be another ball game. Stories are rife to the effect that the entrance requirements at both institutions and the professorial excavations are so high that only the boys with the scholarly minds can get in and stay in.

I am personally acquainted with a large number of Chicago and Princeton alumni of 20 and 30 years ago, many of whom were out for athletics. Today they are leaders in their field nationally. Whether you gauge success by monetary reward or leadership in business, professional or academic life, practically every man of those I have in mind ranks near the top. Yet most of these men could not have got into Chicago or Princeton under the present requirements. I wonder if the students graduating from these institutions this year will be of any higher type or any more successful than this fine group of men I have just mentioned. I doubt it. A university in America is both an intellectual institution and a socializing influence—who is to say which is more important?

It is my guess that Chicago will take Princeton.

MICHIGAN VS. GOPHERS

The worst Michigan can do in the Big Ten is to get a tie with Northwestern. But Northwestern has a long row to hoe before this can take place. Today the Purple meets Minnesota, and, with Bruder back, should take the Gophers, but not via the Gopher line. I predict Northwestern passes will turn the trick.

I pick Wisconsin to beat Ohio State, while the Illinois-Purdue game is a toss-up. Purdue played great ball to turn back the fighting Badgers last Saturday, but I doubt if it can reach that high pitch two Saturdays in succession. Zuppke's green team is much better than its last two scores showed and by the time Illinois meet the Army it will be a dangerous foe for anyone.

Detroit has too strong a team for Iowa, and Notre Dame should take Indiana without putting on full pressure.

PICKS PITT TO WIN

In the Big Six, I look for Oklahoma to defeat Iowa State. The Kansas Aggies should down Missouri, but Pitt will have just a little too much on the ball for Nebraska. The Pitt team will be tremendously encouraged by its fine showing against Notre Dame in the second half last Saturday, and I believe the momentum it gathered will be a great help in the clash with the Cornhuskers.

As regards the Kansas-Penn game, I would say that Kansas will best Penn if Jim Bausch is in the lineup. Without Bausch, I would say Penn will win. Penn has a lot better team than its score against Wisconsin would indicate, not that the Badgers didn't deserve to win.

In the Missouri Valley, I believe Drake will take Washington. Creighton will beat Grinnell, but the Oklahoma Aggies will find the Haskell Indians more of a meal than they can digest. In Weller, a little 150-pound halfback, the Indians have one of the finest all-round backs in the country.

PRINCETON VICTOR

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 1.—Princeton defeated Lafayette at cross-country by a score of 26-29 here yesterday. Princeton freshmen bested St. Benedict, 19-36.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 48.

In the season of 1927 we started with an outfield composed of Lamar, Simmons and Cobb, with Wheat and French in reserve. Boley was at short, with Eddie Collins at second, Hale at third and Branom at first.

Connie Mack

Branom was a newcomer from the American Association and did not last long, and Poole, Dykes and Foxx were at first before the season ended.

I had signed during the winter another famous batting veteran in Zach Wheat, many years the batting mainstay of the Brooklyn team, and we also had this experienced player as an extra outfielder and pinch-hitter.

We started on the wrong foot that season, dropping three straight to New York and tieing one at the Yankee Stadium and then went to Washington and won three out of four games.

Our work in the first half of the season was poor. On July 4 we were in fifth place and then began to improve. Before the halfway mark ended I made some changes.

Eddie Collins had trouble with his legs and I decided to restore Bishop to second base and keep Collins as my field lieutenant and reservist.

I also dropped Branom as my first-sacker and used Poole and Dykes there. Hale sometimes was out of the lineup, in which case Dykes, who can play any position on the team, was used at third.

FOXX GOES TO FIRST

By the time the season was ending, Jimmy Foxx, who I thought ought to be in the game regularly, was having his first trial at first base.

U to that time, Foxx had the rating of a catcher, but had seen little service behind the bat because Cochrane was used virtually every day.

Yet when Foxx would get his [illegible] to [illegible] so powerfully at the bat that it gave me a problem. Here I had two remarkable hitting catchers and yet could use only one.

I was thinking of the future when I decided that the most important problem I had to solve was to make some switch wherein both Foxx and Cochrane would be in the game every day.

After sizing up their respective abilities, I decided that Foxx and not Cochrane was the man to be shifted. I thought it would be foolish to try to let Cochrane do anything but catch, for by this time he was the sparkplug of our ball club.

So it was up to me to find a place for Foxx. I had in mind two positions for him, third or first. I decided to start with him at first base and he was stationed there at the end of the season.

ANOTHER YANKEE YEAR

Late that season, I released Outfielder Lamar to Washington but he did not report and the next season found him in the minors.

As I said before, we did not find our true stride until the last half of the season and then we began to win games and advance in the standing, but it was hopeless for us to try to overtake the Yankees.

The Yanks fairly murdered all opposition in 1927, and, while we managed to finish well ahead of Washington for second honors, we were 20 games behind New York.

This was the easiest pennant triumph ever scored by the Yanks, and the sports writer who described the 1927 race as consisting of one pennant winner and seven tailenders was not far from the truth.

SCOURS MINO" LEAGUES

As the season closed, I realized that I was no nearer a pennant than I had been in 1925. I knew there was nothing for me to do but to keep on trying.

After our bad start that season I had instructed my scouts to be unduly vigilant and to bring in all of the players they could. We scoured the minor leagues and had quite a number of new players purchased for 1928 delivery.

DAVIES MAY BOX RODGERS

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, just graduating from the flyweight class into the bantamweight for his bout with Archie Bell, of Brooklyn, at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, may go a step further and take on a featherweight rival if he is successful in this battle. He would like to get another crack at Jackie Rodgers, local Negro star, whom he fought twice when Jackie was a bantamweight and whose sensational winning streak of eight straight knockouts was halted by Bell at Motor Square Garden last season. If Bell wins Monday's contest, he may be matched for a return bout with Rodgers.

Bell is due to arrive in town tomorrow morning and will work out at the Garden in the afternoon.

Incidentally, Amos and Andy, who will be here in person for KDKA's celebration Monday, have been invited, through Announcer Louis K. Kaufman, to attend the boxing show Monday night as guests of the management, and they may be able to be on hand for the main bout.

H. H. Scott, sports scribe of Newark, O., vouches for the ability of Georgie Annarino, bantamweight of that place, who makes his Pittsburgh debut against Jackie Wilson, Negro, of Homewood, in one of the bouts on the Tom Malco-Larry Madge card at the Moose Temple next Thursday night. He says Annarino has engaged in 60 bouts and has won 40 of them by the knockout route.

Rockne Confident Of Victory Today

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Indiana hasn't conquered Notre Dame on the football field for 24 long years and, barring the most astounding upset of the season, the stretch will be extended to an even quarter of a century at the end of their seventeenth battle today.

Even the most rabid Hoosier fans anticipated an easy victory for the Fighting Irish, who have marched through far sterner opposition this season in defeating the Navy, Southern Methodists, Carnegie Tech and Pittsburgh.

Coach Knute Rockne also felt confident of an Irish victory, and said he would return to the old shock troop system of attack, a Rockne method that was fearfully shoved aside for two battles with C[illegible] Pittsburgh.

WEST PENN CUP TIE TODAY

By TOM BIRKS.

Soccer interest locally today will center around the playing of the West Penn cup game, featuring the Union Switch and Signal eleven opposed to the Pittsburgh Rovers at Leslie Park. This meeting between old rivals will attract a capacity crowd. One of them is going to say good-bye to the competition for another season.

Heidelberg yesterday stated the game with Beadling carded for this afternoon has been called off. The Glendale-Bridgmont game tomorrow afternoon will start at 1:30 sharp, the referee should note.

Two games will be played in the Central League. Sons of St. George hook up with the Celtics at Mellon Field. The other battle finds the Crafton Heights club playing Clan Douglas at the Westinghouse High School Stadium.

The Shannon Fintex-Mollenauer junior game will be played at Mollenauer starting at 3 p. m.

HAUS GIRLS TO BOWL

The Haus Recreation girls' bowling team meets the Ambridge team, stars of the Beaver Valley, in a special match of three games on the Haus Recreation alleys, North Side, at 8 o'clock this evening. Next Saturday night the Haus girls engage the New Kensington team at the same place.

STRIB STOPS CHRISTNER IN THIRD

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—W. L. (Young) Stribling, Georgia heavyweight, was awarded the decision over Meyer (K. O.) Christner, of Akron, O., in the third round of a scheduled 10-round bout at the Arena here last night.

A badly swollen left eye, resulting from one of Stribling's terrific lefts in the first round, hampered Christner in the second round, and when Stribling landed on the same spot with force enough to draw blood in the third round, Referee Johnny Brassil stopped the fight and awarded the contest to Stribling.

BRADY BEATS LEE

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 1.—Jackie Brady, Syracuse welterweight, combined speed and cleverness to carve out a 10-round decision over Canada Lee, New York Negro, here last night, in an interesting bout.

Mack House, giant Negro heavyweight from the Coast, won an easy victory over Tiny DeBolt, of Conneaut, O., in the 10-round semi-final.

Patsy Severo, Meadville featherweight, gained a six-round decision over Joe Ward, of Cleveland, in a fast and furious engagement in which Severo's cleverness was a determining factor.

Tommy Palmer, Cleveland, and Johnny Toran, Erie Negro, boxed a four-round draw in the opener. They are flyweights.

TUFFY GRIFFITHS WINS

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City heavyweight, made a punching bag out of George Neron, importation from Athens, Greece, in their eight-round match in the Coliseum here last night, but was forced to be content with a decision victory.

MARA ON STAND IN TUNNEY SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Gene Tunney showed apparent pleasure over yesterday's developments in the $500,000 suit brought against him by Tim Mara, sports promoter, for alleged violation of a oral contract.

It was indicated by Emory R. Buckner, Tunney's attorney, that on January 20, 1926, Tunney signed a contract with the late Tex Rickard for a championship fight with Jack Dempsey. Mara bases his suit on an oral conference with Tunney on April 3, 1926, nearly three months later, at which time, according to Mara, Tunney promised 10 per cent of the gate receipts if Mara would aid him.

Mara said on the stand that he had never known of any such contract until it was shown him in court.

"There was no discussion of it at the conference on April 3," Mara testified.

ASKED CO-OPERATION

Buckner asked Mara:

"At this conference did Tunney ask your assistance toward getting a match with Dempsey?"

"He asked me to co-operate, assist and advise him if he got a match with Dempsey," Mara replied.

"Did he ask you any specific thing he wanted you to do?"

"No, nothing specific, only to keep him advised of the situation while he was away."

"Did you read in the newspapers late in March that the Dempsey-Tunney match was already arranged?"

ALREADY SIGNED

Mara examined March newspapers, and said he did not think he saw the stories published. "It would be rather hard for me to remember what I read in the papers five years ago," he added.

Long's Sport Comment

still in his prime, were discovered chopping trees and doing road work every day, it could mean only one thing—an attempted comeback.

Gene Tunney.

But it's different with Gene Tunney. The retired heavyweight title-holder looked like a trained fighter when he appeared before Supreme Court Justice Hatting in New York as defendant in a suit for $400,000 for alleged breach of contract, filed against him by Tim Mara, promoter, in connection with the Dempsey fight in Philadelphia.

TUNNEY DISPLAYED BLISTERED hands as evidence of the wood-chopping, admitted he had been running on the road every day, said he was as hard as nails and down to his old fighting weight around 192 pounds, but declared he had no fistic intentions. "I am through with the ring forever," he said. "I will never fight again. I am not interested in making money. I have enough. I am not extravagant and live modestly on a little farm near Stamford, Conn. I am waiting for business to adjust itself and then I am going to get into something. After I get this suit and a few other matters off my mind I am going to do something I regard as useful." When Dempsey's name was brought up, Tunney added: "I have only the kindest thoughts of Dempsey. He is a splendid chap. I wish him the greatest success, and I hope to have the opportunity some day soon of sitting down with him and having a long chat."*

"FAIR PLAY" WRITES from Oakmont to plead for the restoration of the former system of issuing hunting licenses. "For the convenience of those residing in the outlying districts of the county," he says, "aldermen and justces of the peace formerly were allowed a limited number of licenses, so that a hunter could drop into such an office in his home district and obtain a license at his convenience. This convenient plan has been discontinued. Hunters are requred to go to the office of the county treasurer in Pittsburgh for licenses, or to send in their applications through somebody who happens to be making the trip.

"Many must travel long distances, and applicants must be there at a certain time and then may be forced to stand in line for hours. A man trying to get five or six licenses to save that number of friends from making the trip may be informed that he is limited to two. Justices tell me that they are willing to put up bonds or even to pay in advance for licenses in order to make it convenient for their people to get them, but to no avail. The same inconvenience is experienced in obtaining fishing and dog licenses. Hunters, fishermen and dog owners are urged to notify the game commission and their representatives in the Legislature of the unsatisfactory conditions now existing."

WHEN KID CHOCOLATE enters the ring with Fidel La Barba in New York on Monday it will be the Cuban Negro's one hundred and seventy-first fight. He has lost only one, that a decision to Jack (Kid) Berg. The winner of this bout is to face Bud Taylor on November 28. Chocolate serves notice through his manager, Luis Gutierrez, that if he wins both bouts he will challenge Battling Battalino to a fight for the featherweight championship, and that if the challenge falls on deaf ears he will forsake the featherweight ranks.

Though Chocolate would be the drawing card in such a match Guiterrez says he has no thought of demanding the lion's share of the money, but would be content with the challengers usual slice of 12½ per cent against 37½ for the champion. If a title match develops Tom McArdle will put it on in Madison Square Garden some time in January.

Marchmont Schwartz.

AFTER ALL, THAT great backfield of Notre Dame, admittedly the country's best of the present day as a whole, will not be lost in its entirety by graduation before the arrival of the 1931 season. One member of the sensational Hurtling Herd that is now being compared to the famous Four Horsemen of six years ago will be back on the job in the Irish lineup next fall. And that member happens to be one of the most brilliant of the lot, in the person of Marchmont Schwartz, left halfback. It develops that there was an error in the published statistics of the Notre Dame team which listed Schwartz as playing his third season on the varsity eleven. In reality, this is only his third or junior year as a student in the university and only his second season in varsity football, so that he will not graduate until the spring of 1932 and will be eligible to play again next year. Furthermore, there is a chance that Schwartz may be captain of the Notre Dame eleven in 1931 to succeed Tom Conley. He is in line for that honor as one of only six seniors who will be on the squad, the others being Tom Yarr, Bert Metzger, Clarence Kaplan, Alvin Culver and Art McManmon. Schwartz, who prepped at Bay St. Louis, Miss., got his first name from a race horse. The family resides in New Orleans, and the player's father once won a large sum of money at one of the tracks there on a horse named Marchmont. So he selected that name for the present gridiron star, who was born shortly afterward.*

N. Y. U. COACHES HERE

CHICK MEEHAN LUBY DIMEOLO

SPORT VIGNETTES

In its bid for its second straight national championship, the Notre Dame football team faces its stiffest test in the very last game on its schedule, with Howard Jones' University of Southern California eleven . . . Southern Cal. always has been a thorn in the side of the Irish, who in four attempts have been able to win three times, but on each occasion by the margin of only one point, while, in the other contest, the score was 47 to 14 in favor of Southern California. That was in 1928. In 1926, Coach Knute Rockne's men won, 13-12; in 1927, 7-6, and, in 1929, again by 13-12 . . . Last year's Southern California team crushed both Carnegie Tech and Pitt even more decisively than Notre Dame defeated the same teams this fall, the scores, respectively, being 45-13 and 47-14 . . . So far this season, Southern Cal., has rolled up 191 points against 26 in five games . . . Recently the Trojans suffered a 7-6 defeat by Washington, but came back last Saturday to down Pop Warner's Stanford team, 41-12. . . . The Notre Dame-Southern California game this year is set for December 6, at Los Angeles, and looms as a whale of battle.

Howard Jones

In Philadelphia, the ticket speculators already are advertising in the papers that they buy, trade and sell choice tickets for the Penn-Notre Dame game . . . The 1932 Olympic Games at Los Angeles will get under way on Saturday, July 30, and run through Sunday, August 14 . . . Coast papers and fans are on Pop Warner, Stanford coach, in no uncertain fashion and they rubbed it in after his Cardinals took that pasting from Southern California last week . . . Must remind the veteran of his stormy final seasons at Pitt . . . Believe it or not, but the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with its Jess Carver on the scene, is the only local newspaper represented by a staff correspondent at the Pitt-Nebraska game at Lincoln today . . . Practically every one of the many New York newspapers will have a staff man at the Carnegie Tech-N. Y. U., game at The Stadium today . . . A luncheon was tossed them at the Keystone Club at noon today and there will be sandwiches and coffee in the press box between halves of the game. . . . Oh, for the jolly life of a football reporter!

Penn State, beaten, 40-0, by Colgate on its home gridiron last Saturday, meets Bucknell at Lewisburg today . . . Bucknell is the oldest gridiron foe of the Nittany Lions . . . The rivals first met back in 1887 and played two games that fall, State winning the first, at Lewisburg, 54-0, and taking the second at State College, a month later, 24-0. That was in the cradle days of the sport, and the game has changed in many respects since, including the doing away with more than one meeting between two teams in one season . . . Today's game will be the first between the teams at Lewisburg in more than 20 years. State has been unable to win from Bucknell in the three years that Carl Snavely has been coach of the Bisons, his teams having won the annual meetings at State College, 13-7, 6-0 and 27-6.—HARRY KECK.

GENEVA BEATS F. & M. ELEVEN BY 24-8 TALLY

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The Covenanters of Geneva College came fully up to pre-game predictions and defeated the Franklin and Marshall College football warriors under floodlights here last night, 24 to 8.

The Covenanters assumed what proved to be a winning margin in the first quarter when they pushed over two of their four touchdowns for 12 points, while the best the visitors could do in the initial period was two points, garnered from an automatic safety when Grahame, Geneva quarterback, stepped outside in the end zone on a short pass to Ewing.

Two more touchdowns in the second and third quarters by Ewing and Robbins ran up the Gold and White total, with the Lancaster outfit threatening only in the third quarter, when Britten crossed the goal line on a line plunge.

All tries for points after touchdown failed.

Britten in the backfield and Cunningham in the line starred for the visitors, while Knapic's sensational play was well supported by Cunningham, 220-pound guard.

Cold weather kept down the attendance. The lineup:

Geneva—24		F. & M.—8
Rose	L.E.	Orth
Cooper	L.T.	Ege
Stauffer	L.G.	Davidson
Ralston	C.	Streit
Boswell	R.G.	Ritter

Bozek, Leary, Wallace (H.B.), Bandzul (C.); for Michigan State: Fase (E.), Grandy, Buskert (G.), Breen (H.B.), Kovacs (F.B.). Referee—G. R. Vierling, Umpire—C. E. Price. Linesman—E. M. Dennis. Field judge—H. B Springer.

MICHIGAN STATE BOWS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Sleepy Jim Crowley, one of the original Four Horsemen, brought his undefeated Michigan State gridders to Griffith Stadium last night, confident of victory, but Georgetown came to life after two straight defeats and handed the visitors a 14-to-13 jolt. The locals were figured as the underdogs, even by their coach, Tom Mills, after two defeats at the hands of Western Maryland and West Virginia.

The defeat was the first for the Wolverine stars. They had played Michigan to a scoreless, tie and numbered Colgate as one of their victims.

Georgetown scored in the second and third quarters on forward passes and long runs by Johnny Scalzi. His first counter came after a 50-yard dash, and the second after a 95-yard getaway.

Michigan State was unable to score until the final period, when its weight told on the lighter players. Michigan made most of its gains on line plays. The lineup:

Georgetown—14.		Michigan—13.
Hudson	L.E.	Fox
Kattilner	L.T.	Elso
Dubolsky	L.G.	Goss
Morris	C.	Mohrs
Danner	R.G.	Streit

ALFRED TOPS HOBART

ALFRED, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Hobart took another step towards winning football's booby prize yesterday in losing to Alfred's varsity team by a score of 19-0. Hobare has now lost six games, all with shutout scores. Hobart won no game in 1929, but did make a few points.

OLYMPICS AT AKRON

Manager Freddie Iverson has arranged for a special train to take his Olympics to Akron for the game with the Awnings tomorrow. The special will pull out of the Tube City over the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad tomorrow morning at 7:45, and will make stops at Braddock, Homestead and Pittsburgh, leaving Pittsburgh at 8:15. The special will return to McKeesport tomorrow night at 10:30.

HUNTERS OPEN NEW SEASON

Cross-country racing is being staged on a big scale today as thousands of nimrods, armed with pep, optimism and firing pieces, inaugurate the hunting season in this state by pursuing furred and feathered "main course" material through field and forest.

The open season for rabbits, wild turkeys, pheasants (male only), ruffer grouse, Virginia partridge (commonly called quail, gambel quail and valley quail), black, red, fox, gray and pine squirrels, bear, raccoon, muskrat, mink, opossum, skunk and otter opened at sun-up to the tune of more explosions than ever made up a presidential salute. Small game is reported exceptionally plentiful this year, and the many well-filled bags seen in the Pittsburgh district hunting grounds indicated that many a confirmed vegetarian will weaken and accept a few helpings of fresh meat tonight and tomorrow.

Game wardens roaming the fields are busy enforcing the ruling against smoking and building fires, as well as checking up on hunting licenses. Gov. Fisher agreed that the season might be opened today only on provision that smoking and fire building be tabooed. The drought is responsible for the unusual regulations.

Approximately 30,000 hunting licenses have been issued in Allegheny County, and clerks at the treasurer's office predict a new record total. More than 500,000 licenses will be issued in the state.

Westinghouse High School took a big step toward the city scholastic football championship yesterday when it defeated Schenley High, 6-0, on the Westinghouse field. The regular lineup of the Westinghouse team, which also halted the recent rush of South High, is pictured above.

WESTINGHOUSE VICTOR OVER SCHENLEY

An attractive schedule of high-class football games is on tap for followers of the interscholastic sport in this section today. Featuring the card is the battle between Clairton, last year's W. P. I. A. L. champion, and Greensburg, scheduled at Clairton. Greensburg is reported somewhat crippled for the contest, five of its regulars being said to be out of the lineup because of injuries, but those who have followed the fortunes of the Westmoreland countians feel certain the Brown and White will present a strong front against the defending champion.

BIG GAMES CARDED

Another game that is certain to lure a large crowd is between Washington and Turtle Creek Union at Washington. They are old gridiron rivals. Washington, fresh from its victory over New Castle last Saturday, will be out to continue its drive for the district championship by scoring a verdict over Foxy Miller's smooth-working eleven. Both teams have been playing exceptionally good football and will take the field primed for the battle.

Wilkinsburg faces one of its oldest antagonists when it entertains Peabody on Graham Field, Wilkinsburg. Regardless of the showing of these teams in early-season struggles their annual battle always manages to attract a large crowd of divided supporters. Peabody usually plays its best brand of football when opposed to Wilkinsburg and today should prove no exception. Wilkinsburg is expecting a tough battle from the East Enders.

Coach Jimmy Robertson's Shady Side Academy eleven entertains University School, of Cleveland, at Shady Side today. The Fox Chapel gridders are eager to upset the Ohioans and will send a strong team against the invaders. The same schools met in a soccer game at Shady Side this morning.

WESTINGHOUSE VICTOR

Two exceptional high school football teams went to the mat yesterday afternoon when Westinghouse and Schenley staged a remarkable battle on the former's field. The home team won, 6 to 0, but the honors were so close to being even that the lads of the Bellefield district did not lose any prestige in the grueling fight.

The contest from start to finish was better than many a college fray you will see in an up-to-date bowl. The well-drilled tribes of Burton and Gross fought furiously, Fullback Field taking the ball over for Westinghouse in the second period. The try for point was missed.

Schenley came within a few yards of tieing the score in the closing minutes of play. Due principally to all-around brilliance of Joe Mihm, smashing fullback, the invading club brought the ball to within 10 yards of the enemy posts, but the home guards took the ball on downs. A moment later, Westinghouse fumbled, and the Schenley boys went to work again within the shadow of the goal. A forward pass play had just been completed when the final whistle blew.

DYE, WARES STAR

Bobby Dye and Showboat Wares starred in the Westinghouse backfield. Dye made a number of brilliant runs. He made a fine catch of a forward pass from Wares that paved the way for the only touchdown of the battle. This lively youngster was a threat throughout the game, both offensively and on defense

Mihm's sparkling play made him stand out as one of the greatest of scholastic performers. Big Joe punted splendidly, he smashed the line like a star, and he threw some accurate passes that netted gains. On defense he was a tower of strength to the defeated eleven. The lineup:

Westinghouse—6		Schenley—1.
Wendell	L. E.	Wilkie
C. Sullivan	L. T.	Rembert
Hayes	L. G.	Frost

WHITEY WALINCHUS

Walinchus, subbing for Josh Williams after the latter was hurt, was a star for Pitt against Nebraska last year and may repeat if he gets into the lineup at Lincoln today.

PITT FAVORED OVER 'HUSKERS AT LINCOLN

more. It's true. Mr. Ripley ought to be able to do something or other with it.

A pair of young gentlemen from England (though after you read this one you'll think they must have come from Scotland) have been touring the Middle West in a series of debates. They were house guests of a Hastings College man in Hastings, and the host, wishing to entertain the Britons, took them out pheasant hunting.

The trio was traipsing about the woods and fields, seeking the birdies, when one of the Englishmen tripped and fell into a pile of brush. There was a grunt and a squawk, and when he picked himself up, lo and behold, he'd tumbled on a pheasant which had been hiding there, and killed the bird.

The moral of this story has been lost, somehow, but it is still a good story.

The wish of Coach Bible, of Nebraska, that Pitt would come directly into Lincoln this year instead of spending Friday in Omaha, was not granted. It used to be, you know, that visiting teams who stayed overnight here before a game were kept awake by a series of torchlight parades about the hotel and smaller-scale processions of slightly inebriated gents about the corridors on the floor on which they were roomed.

It was also an old Nebraska custom to let the grass on the playing field grow as long as possible when a fast team, such as Notre Dame, was to be played, and on one occasion the field was well soaked the night before.

Coach Bible is a square shooter and a fine fellow. He told me last year that he wanted Pitt to come directly to Lincoln this fall and that he'd guarantee wet and quiet in large doses the night before the game.

All of which reminds me of a story on Glenn Thistlewaite, at Wisconsin. Notre Dame was playing at Madison, and the gridiron resembled a hay field, so long was the grass. It was explained that the Wisconsin authorities had been having trouble developing the turf on their field and had been forced to let the grass grow.

The following week Doc Spears took his Minnesota team into Madison, and the Doc had been tipped off by Rockne that he was going to have the long grass to beat, beside the rugged Wisconsin team.

The day before the game, Minnesota was staging a workout and flocks of newspapermen and hangers-on were standing around watching. Spear suddenly dropped to his knees and started crawling about the field, parting the grass and peering intently about him.

"What the heck is the matter with you, Doc?" Thistlewait asked. "Did you lose something?

"Oh, no," replied the portly Spears. "Rock told me he lost a couple halfbacks here last week and asked me to see if I could find them."

The next week the grass was cut.

Racing Meet Opens At Arlington Downs

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The racing season was under way at Arlington Downs, million-dollar plant of W. T. Waggoner, owner of the Three D stables, known on race tracks throughout the country.

"The Inaugural," a six-furlong event for all ages, headed a program of six races.

Horses and horsemen here from throughout the United States gave promise of a successful season. Reveille Boy, owned by John A. Best, of Memphis, Tenn., and winner of the $50,000 American Derby, was among a special consignment of horses entered from the Hawthorne track at Chicago.

SHIRES MAY BE SEAL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Reports current in sporting circles today had it that Art (Whataman) Shires, first baseman for the Washington American League baseball team, would be in the uniform of the San Francisco Seals next season.

JACK BRADY WINS

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Jackie Brady, Syracuse, won a 10-round decision over Canada Lee here last night.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.

Seemed like old times to hear Mr. Coolidge on the radio, especially when he pleaded for "a continuation of Republican blessings."

Will Rogers.

He said what we needed in office was "office holders," men that were used to holding office. He said it was no time to break in new talent. Compare that campaign plea with the one of my old friend, Gov. Bulow, of South Dakota, who is out for the Senate: "There are no issues in this election. The other fellow has got a job and I want it." Such honesty must come from a Democrat. It does, and it should be rewarded at the polls. Yours,

WILL.

F. W. Murnau, Silent Film Director, Goes Back To Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 1.

His presence is known to few, and, as he is shunning publicity, he doubtless won't appreciate this story. But news is news.

Before the advent of the talking films, Murnau directed "The Last Laugh" in Germany, starring Emil Jannings, and the lovely, mystic "Sunrise" for Fox.

Ann Harding

Of late, he has been engaged in a film venture with Robert Flaherty in the South Seas. The two have made a silent picture there, and Murnau plans to return to Tahati to make his home. Like Gauguin, he is fascinated with the beauty of the island.

The director plans to do one or two pictures a year in the South Seas.

Murnau's voyage across the Pacific was accomplished in romantic fashion. He sailed in a 60-foot boat, and has returned the same way. He is close-mouthed on the purpose of his visit to Hollywood.

Bull Montana, who wrestled before he turned actor, has been engaged as a special trainer for Douglas Fairbanks during the filming of "Reaching for the Moon." . . . Ann Harding is the latest film star to fall for the aviation craze. She and her husband, Harry Bannister, are buying a plane and the star insists she will learn to pilot it. Pathe may have something to say about that, however. . . . Earle Foxe, exheavy, has 117 boys enrolled in his military school. . . . Janet Gaynor will sing after all in her new picture, "The Man Who Came Back." The public's due for a shock when Janet is revealed in this thriller as a dope fiend.

CALM MR. KERRIGAN

J. M. Kerrigan, Irish character, displays a calm, which, under the circumstances, must be dangerous.

A short time ago Frank Borzage promised him a part in "Young Sinners" if he would lose 12 pounds. With the aid of steam-rooms, Kerrigan brought his weight down to the desired poundage. But the picture was postponed.

J. M. Kerrigan

Within a few days, John Ford said he might have a part for him in "The Seas Beneath" if he were 10 pounds heavier. Kerrigan ate heartily and brought his weight back. Then Walter C. Kelley got the part.

Now Frank Lloyd suggests that there might be a part for Kerrigan in "East Lynne" if he takes off 10 pounds.

The actor grimly has returned to the steam rooms.

Apple, Potato Show Closes With Awards

The third annual apple and potato show of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce closed last night with the awarding of the Pennsylvania Farmer silver trophy to Somerset County for the best county exhibits of potatoes. There were more than 500 displays from farmers in West Virginia, Ohio, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Henry Eby, Allegheny County farm agent and show committee chairman, announced the list of farmers and orchardists who submitted the best exhibits of apples and potatoes.

Hat Cleaning Shop Fire Damage $500

The hat cleaning shop of Nathan Burnard, at 1612 Center avenue, was damaged to the extent of $500 by fire which broke out in the rear room of the place last night. The flames, discovered by a pedestrian, was quickly extinguished by firemen.

GANGLAND 'WIDOW' IN FILM AT ENRIGHT

By BARBARA WILBERT

"The Widow from Chicago" brings to the Enright her story of how she tries to outwit one of the cleverest leaders of gangland. Domenic, known to movie fans as Edward G. Robinson. Alice White sidesteps for a moment, from her usual character of the flippant girl of the jazz age to give us some acting of a deeper nature.

Her brother is "bumped off" and she swears revenge. She is a dashing young widow, but not for long. Neil Hamilton appears and changes the situation. One episode that deserves credit is woven around a cigaret and we agree that it was "lucky" for the "widow."

In fact, she is lucky in her whole career, coming through raids, gang fights, and numerous other dangers.

On the stage, we are delighted with the singing, and dancing, directing and nonsense of Dick Powell and Alice Borden. Miss Borden, being a screen star, is doubly interesting in person. Zastre and White with their dancing girls are clever entertainers, the Rockets step to the music of the band, and "Then Comes the Son" with Johnny Mitchell at the organ. The skit, "Cheer Up" accomplishes the purpose implied in its title.

New Floor Revue Show Boat Feature

The new floor show on the Show Boat, Sixth street and Duquesne way, features Wally Vernon as master of ceremonies. He sings, dances and clowns.

Another feature is The Deamons, adagio dancers. Joe Hiller and Lou Bolton produced the show. Jimmy Carr and his Show Boat orchestra play.

JOHN GILBERT PLAYS FRESH SAILOR LAD ON SEVEN SEAS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When our moving picture heroes put honest dirt on their faces and proceed to play sons of toil, it's a sign that the scenario writers are waking up to the importance of real life on the screen. John Gilbert is the latest Apollo in overalls, as he plays a stevedore or a capstan or something of that sort in "Way for a Sailor" at the Penn Theater.

George Seibel

Every few minutes there is a fight, usually in some bar-room, and usually for no reason except that the sailors got their pay. Out of all these fights everybody emerges without a scratch, although everything from fists to sledge-hammers is used.

There is also a fire on shipboard, a collision or two, heavy seas and lifeboats—and plenty of hard booze and wild women.

OF COURSE HE'S IN LOVE

Wherever we meet John Gilbert we know that of course he's in love. This time it's Leila Hyams, who plays the pretty girl at the pay window. He brings her all sorts of gifts from the seven seas, but she will not listen to him.

That is, not until the scenario writer thinks it's time to ring in the heart stuff. Then she invites John up to her room for tea—and he kisses her.

She calls him "a fresh sailor without any manners," but a few hundred feet further on the reel she sits on the seashore with him, and a little later she marries him.

There is also plenty of fog, a concertina, a pawnshop, and an artistic breeze that billows the heroine's fleecy garments.

BEN BLUE'S REVEALS

To atone for the dirty faces and blowsy blouses of the sailor gang, the stage show presents a cordon of Chester Hale Girls in some "Royal Revels." Ben Blue is the master of the revels, and does it acceptably.

With David Pesetzki and Wild Oscar conducting the orchestra and broadcasting from the organ, the program is as varied and amusing as ever.

SHOWS OPEN TODAY AND NEXT MONDAY

"The Spoilers," talkie version of the Rex Beach novel, filmed as a silent picture years ago, opened yesterday in the Sheridan Square and will be seen on the Fulton screen today. It will be reviewed Monday. Gary Cooper and William Boyd of the stage, play the roles originally played by William Farnum and Tom Santachi.

Aileen Pringle has a featured role in "Soldiers and Women," screen feature in the Harris, beginning today.

"Uncle Vanya," which opens next Monday night in the Shubert Alvin, is produced by Jed Harris. The cast includes Lillian Gish, Walter Connelly, Osgood Perkins, Zitz Johnann, Eugene Powers, Kate Mayhew, Eduardo Ciannelli, Isabel Irving and Harold Johnsrood. Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

Monday night in the Nixon, Vilma Banky and Rod La Roque will open a week's engagement in "Cherries Are Ripe," a new comedy by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

One of the busiest men in the show business right now is Ed Vail, director of the George Sharp Players. In addition to rehearsing the company, directing performances, and playing small parts, he is conducting classes in stagecraft three afternoons a week on the stage of the Pitt Theater.

Mike Sachs and Fred "Falls" Binder are the principal comics and Mae Dix, feminine lead in "Speed Girls," which opens in the Academy with a Sunday midnight show.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright 1930 by Walter Winchell, Inc.)

To Don Wahn

I've read your verse, my dear, with tongue in cheek,
No doubt a score of them were meant for me;
Your heart breaks neatly once a week
And the you ask the mob for sympathy
I never knew I meant so much to you
When we were lovers reaching for the stars,
But now you claim your heart is pierced in two—
You beg the world to pause and view your scars.

I let you go—for I could never hold
A lad whose fancies varied with the wind;
And now you claim that nights are stark and cold,
That love is false and life has proved unkind.
Why, dear, if I should take you back tomorrow

The Guying Guinan

After George Bernard Shaw named his "Eight Great Men," via the microphones, Miss Guinan was asked by a press service to name eight of them. She named Jack Diamond, Al Capone, Al E. Smith, Mayor Walker, David Belasco, Coolidge, Hoover and Winchell. Capone, because he made every street in Chicago a trench. Belasco because "he is the only man who can wear his clothes backwards and get away with it." Smith because he threw away the presidency by pronouncing radio "raddio" (proving that Americans know English). Winchell because "if he doesn't go down in history, he is sure to be pushed down some elevator shaft." Coolidge because "he keeps on sawing wood" and Hoover because "he keeps on knocking wood!"

She said that Mr. Shaw also named Einstein.

"I know a lotta guys," she added, "who are still looking for his murderer."

Heheheh

Thad Taylor, the cartoonist, can make up a sentence containing the name "Cra.." like this:

"Anyway, he sure did Crafer big disturbance!"

Quiteso, Quiteso

Not New, But Clean

Actor: "Can you give me a job?"

N. C. Owner: "Sorry, don't need anyone."

N. C. Owner: "Sorry, buddy. Just hired a feller for a room and two meals a day."

In Case You Hadn't Heard

Earl Carroll's recent exhibition in Boston won for him an army of enemies. His pulpit remarks against the town censor, John Casey, aroused the Boston rags and playgoers. Carroll, it appears, stated that Mr. Casey was old-fashioned, a musician, and knew nothing about things good or bad in the theater. And that Casey had better leave censorship to those better fitted for the job.

Mr. Casey, in his early days, was a drummer in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and when that organization played in a small Michigan city Casey was late for a Detroit-bound train.

He ran after the moving rattler, fell, and lost an arm when another train ran him down. This necessitated his seeking a job in another field. He found his mark in keeping Boston morals high. Mr. Casey, however, was only locally famous—until Carroll came along, mounted a pulpit in a Dorchester church and ballyhooed Casey into sudden fame all over the country, landing front page space as well as editorial mention.

By Way of Report

After the recent raid at La Guinan's new night club the following scene took place near the exit: The two detectives, who were accompanied by a "blind"—a woman picked up and paid, of course, to make the trio look like suckers—shoved her through the door with this comment:

"Okay, Bum. Blow, beat it, git out! We don't need you no more, walk fast."

The "pick up" was a charming looking woman, who probably didn't know she was being used by the police to trap Miss Guinan—who, by the way, is bitter because one reporter wrote that she had asked for mercy.

"I ask for almost everything else," said Tex, "and I usually get it, but I wouldn't ask anyone on Broadway for mercy because that's one thing they won't give you."

The Squelch Ouch!

The late Harry Higgins, one of London's better knowns, was also a snappy come backer. A big game hunter who had been boasting of his jungle conquests, much to the annoyance of a group of bored listeners, was one of his victims.

The windy talker told of shooting a lion, concludjng with:

"Imagine the predicament I was in. Here I was in a spot in the jungle, practically alone, with no means of retreat. In front of me was a roaring lion and behind me a yawning chasm."

"Really," said Higgins, "that must have been awful. But are you quite sure the chasm was yawning as much before you arrived?"

The Crack Bitter

"After being on Broadway so long," grumbled a victim of false friends, "I am surprised that half the people walk. They are so low they ought to be crawling."

In Fewer Words

It would be a better world to live in if some of us had the money to spend in night clubs—and the brains to keep out of them.

Stew Stuff

Walter O'Keefe's contribution for today is this overheard chatter between two drunks on a subway local.

Second Stew: "Hick—we're on a local."

Lobby Singer

ZIEGFELD COWGIRLS AND MR. CANTOR IN ALDINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Eddie Cantor's film version of his stage success "Whoopee," is in the Aldine. It is an elaborate production. It is all done up in technicolor. There is singing, dancing and that sort of thing.

However, the picture isn't in the class with the usual run of film musical comedies. No, indeed. It is much better. It is an excellent piece of screen entertainment.

In one sense it is a movie Western. Its locale is out in the great open spaces. But here the semblance ends. The cowgirls are the good looking kind that Mr. Ziegfield glorifies. The Indians are the stage kind that go about singing songs. And the hero is no two-gun Bill Hart, but a nervous little fellow who is as funny as Mr. Cantor can make him. And that, you know, is plenty funny.

The picture has an effective opening. Galloping riders come dashing toward you and end up at a rancho where they go into a dance and song. And then Cantor shows up and from then on the picture is a riot of Cantor comedy, with a romantic angle, chorus girls and scenic displays looming in the background.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Emily Post says that the modern people of the United States are just as polite as ever, but less formal. Is this an improvement on the old system?

Mrs. Jordan

MRS. J. C. JORDAN, Emsworth, housewife—This new informal code of etiquette is an improvement on the ancient system of exaggeration. Formality, to such a degree, is not necessary to polite society.

Mr. Jordan

J. C. JORDAN, Emsworth, civil engineer—I rather doubt that people are as polite now as they formerly were. Since woman suffrage has come into vogue, it has done away with a good bit of deference shown women by men.

Mr. Gellett

HAROLD GELLETT, Homestead, stock boy—People are not as polite as formerly. With the disappearance of the old system of formality, we find the loss of a certain refinement. People are not as sociable; there is nothing appealing in this false society.

Mrs. Horst

MRS. C. J. HORST, Emsworth, housewife—The freedom and brevity of the new system of manners for polite society is, indeed, refreshing after the lengthy formalities of those of former years. People seem to be relieved more than anything by the present-day etiquette.

Mr. Hunter

RAY HUNTER, North Side—I don't agree with Emily Post. I don't think people are as polite now-a-days. They have become too selfish and prejudiced. If they were polite, a Socialist speaker would receive the same courtesy as a capitalist.

JOHN CONRAD, Castle Shannon, errand boy—The modern system is much better for a concerned. People do not waste so much time in diring formalities, but they imply just as much by their actions as they ever did.

Mr. Conrad

Gleason's Henchmen Trap Entire Gorio Gang

CHAPTER XXI.

Polack Annie emptied the glass and held it up to Goldie, who quickly refilled it. She felt her heart beat faster, but she drank slowly.

"Goldie," she said, "I know you'll think I'm raw. But I'd rather you'd stay here with me tonight than to go to town. I'm beginnin' to feel, too, that somethin' might go cockeyed. I owe you that much," in a reconciled tone. "You've been good to me—mighty good."

Goldie did not answer, but sat and looked at her. Then he said:

"Babes, I love you. If you don't care for me, say so. I don' want no woman what don' want me."

Polack Annie looked him squarely in his blazing eyes. She knew. She saw there why he had gone beyond the limits for her, why he had cleared the house, why he had endangered a score of lives and almost wrecked a metropolis—for this moment: for the answer that was to come from her lips—now.

The Edgewater Kid, the only man she had ever loved or could ever love, was dead. If anyone would avenge him, Goldie would.

"Goldie, dear," she said, in notes like the sob of a 'cello, "I—I'm fond o' you. My heart still hurts so—well, I couldn't say 'I love you' to no man—not yet. But if that'll do—" and she stretched out two quivering hands at the lengths of two shivering arms.

Decides to Stay

With a snort Goldie leaped to his feet. In his charge he kicked over the champagne bucket. The water slushed out upon the priceless carpet, where its puddles fizzed with the wine.

"You—don' want me to go to town tonight?" he breathed.

"No, Goldie," she whispered when he paused for breath. "I wouldn't let you take no such long chances."

Outside could be heard the whine of a police dog.

"I'll stay," he said. "I'll stay—tonight—with you, Babes . . . an' then Goldie's ready."

"Ready?"

"Don't," she gasped. "Goldie—don't!"

"Don't—what?"

"Don't—talk like that."

"Oh . . . I thought—"

"No—no. I tell you."

"I know—tell me again—tell me some more—"

"What more could I tell you, man?"

"Tell me—look at me—tell me—"

His Latin eyes were flaming. His hair was rumpled where she had run her fingers through it. His mouth was twitching.

"I'm—I'm yours—what more could I tell you?"

Gang Congregates

The police dog had ceased his whining. All was still save a low fizzing of a small pool of champagne that had escaped contamination of the water—the melted ice.

* * *

They pulled up to the door of the hangout, car by car. The entrance was in an alley. Across it was the tall, unbroken rear of a gray warehouse. No one could look directly at the door that led into the headquarters of the Gorio gang. It was neither high nor wide enough to let in a car. But when it was opened and some catches were released within, the panels telescoped up and out and made a complete garage opening.

The four cars were neatly backed and ranged against the side wall. The mob found chairs around the flat-top desk, which was Goldie's, and at which no one sat even when he wasn't there. Thirteen of them formed about, smoking and spitting. Cranky, the ex-blacksmith, by nature a killer of joy as he was of men, took census and pointed out the jinx count-up.

"Goldie'll be along now," said Monk, "an' he'll run us up to 14."

"Don' be simple," grinned One-Eye. "The answer's one word — Annie. He all but knocked me an' Whitey off becus' he thought we was moochin' on him and her in the big shack. Soon's he learns her how to be a lady he'll be here—an' no sooner."

They talked along for hours. Once Ray had the temerity to phone the country house. No answer.

"He's out," said he.

"Or he's in," chuckled Monk. "Out or in, he pays no 'tention to bells, bulls or nothin' 'less he feels like it. . . I guess he's on the way here, at that. It's daylight."

"Here he comes now," exclaimed Moon-Face, as a buzzing in the amplifier rigged to both ends of the alley as a tip-off to any approach by foot, horse or engine, gave warning.

"No chance," snapped Ray. "If Goldie's car grumbled like that he'd shoot me in the ankle . . . I'll give a look."

Policemen Visit

"Nix," warned Monk, who, in the absence of Goldie, assumed the lead. "Two flatfoots wouldn't brace this joint lookin' for trouble. Anyway, not harness men—they'd send plainclothers from homicide detail. Lemme handle 'em . . . they're harmless."

There was knocking at the door. Monk opened it. He saw a small department car, such as is used for patrol service. At the wheel sat a sergeant, wearing traffic insignia. Standing at the threshold was a uniformed lieutenant.

"Come out of it," protested the officer. "I'm Lootenant Minnehan—I got a message for Goldie from the cap'n—where is he?"

"I ain't tellin' nobody nothin'. What's the message?"

Trapped by Gleason

"Well, it's this . . . the cap'n says for the lot o' you to beat it an' beat it fast . . . the chief's wise to the hangout — Chimp went rat—the homicide squad's on the way, an'—"

"To the cars," cried Monk.

Like firemen at the alarm, the 13 sprang for their places. Their backs were to the door. Ray's foot was on the starter. A sudden roar in the amplifier made them hesitate. Simultaneously from both ends of the short alley two dark touring cars bearing police plates front and back pulled up at the door. A dozen or more men poured forth. In the lead ran a giant carrying a Lewis machine gun strapped to his forearm. Behind him swarmed others with sawed-off shotguns, Luegers, Army automatics. The uniformed men drew regulation Colts.

"Line up against that wall, hands up, backs turned," cried the big man with the typewriter. "We're homicide men. You all stand for a frisk."

It had come about so quickly that the intensive mechanical and mental precautions of the perfectly equipped fortress and the hair-trigger trained gangsters had failed to function. Whitey Peters, as he got out of a car, reached furtively under his coat. A bullet from the sergeant's gun got him through the brain and he went down, face first. The typewriter was waving back and forth with deadly suggestiveness.

"Where's Goldie?" he demanded.

"Say, whoever the hell you are, who the hell do you think I am?" he clicked. "You ain' no dicks—now cut out the third degree an' come clean. What is all this hokum?"

". . . it's Gleason—Sec'tary Gleason!"

'Pick-Up' Meetings Usually Spell Regret for the Girl, Says Fay King

By FAY KING.

It sometimes happens that a stranger addresses himself to a girl. This in itself, if done in a polite way, is not a great crime.

In fact, it seems a pity sometimes that grown-ups may not like children say "hello"—and "what's your name?"

But in too many cases young men who take this liberty are only out for a good time and such meetings usually end in more or less regret for a girl.

In exceptional cases such informal meetings have developed into friendship and marriage. But first it has taken caution and time in which each proved worthy of respect and regard.

Marion Confides to Madge Happening Preceding Her Trip From School

To my surprise—and joy—Marion did not hesitate at all in her answer to my query as to what Charles Owen had said in persuading her to leave school with his niece without her mother's knowledge and a day in advance of her schedule.

"You see, it was this way," Marion began. "The girls without demerits could get off today; those with one get off tomorrow, and those with more have to wait till the regular day of school breaking up. Carolyn and I each had one, but weren't sure whether we could work them off or not. So, as the other two girls had two that couldn't work off and couldn't leave till tomorrow, anyway, we just wrote home that tomorrow was the day we would leave.

"And then we found day before yesterday that we had worked ours off and could leave today if our parents knew about it. But it was so late and we were afraid it would upset all the plans, so as the other girls had to wait anyway, we just sat tight. But then this morning Uncle Charlie drove up——"

"Just a minute, Marion," I interrupted. "If I were in your place I would not call Mr. Owen 'Uncle Charlie.' I am sure your mother would not like it."

"All right," she said docilely. "I won't——" But I chose to answer her unfinished question.

"I'm going to tell you what's the matter, Marion," I said slowly, "but I want your promise that you will not speak of it to anyone, not even to your mother. She does not realize that you are growing up and she still wants to shield you as she would a little child. Do you understand me, and can you keep your own counsel?"

"Of course I can," she said.

"Then," I began, choosing my words carefully, for I did not wish to voice too scathing a denunciation of Charles Owen—the time was not ripe for that—"I want you to know that your mother—does not like Mr. Owen. We know something about his life which makes us feel that he is not quite the proper person to trust you with for any journey or excursion, even if he is Carolyn's uncle."

Then did Marion astonish me. She flopped over to the seat opposite me and leaned forward with shining eyes.

"Do you mean," she said, "that he's been a bootlegger or a gangster or a Raffles? How perfectly thrilling!"

"Nothing so interesting, I'm afraid, Marion," I answered, making my voice sound as bored as possible. "I can't tell you now, but you'll know some day just what it is that we've found out about him, but won't you trust me when I tell you that I am sure when you do know it you will be glad you avoided him as much as possible?"

"Of course, I believe you, Auntie Madge," she answered quickly. "But," her voice was puzzled now, "how am I going to manage it? He's Carolyn's uncle, you know, and he's been down to the school a lot to see her since he came back from his trip."

I made the mental comment that this was the first time we had heard this news from Marion. She had not mentioned it in her letters.

"The same thing may happen again that did this morning," she went on. "He drove up in his car and asked to see Carolyn. Then he told us about Ronald's coming and asked us if we could drive home with him. He had a note to Mrs. Barnes from Carolyn's mother, and in it she said she hoped I could come with Carolyn if convenient. Of course, Carolyn and I were wild to come home with him, but Mrs. Barnes thought a long while before she said 'Yes' about me. Oh, Auntie Madge, you don't suppose mother will think Mrs. Barnes was at fault, do you? I just couldn't stand that."

Horoscopes

Sunday, November 2

Sunday's horoscope is a very propitious one for church, charity and the clergy and ecclesiastical affairs in general. These should bring recognition and happy fruition to cherished aims. Other matters are under baneful ray.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year of somewhat conflicting conditions, with the prospect of promotion and fulfilled ambitions well strengthened, but accompanied by a menace of friction or misunderstanding with employers and a threat of litigation, dispute or slander, unless a very sharp rein be kept on tongue and temper.

A child born on this day should be efficient and ambitious with excellent promise of success, but it may need rigorous training and discipline in early childhood to suppress its tendency to talkativeness and ill-controlled activities.

Monday, November 3

Monday's astrological chart holds testimony of much unexpected activity, probably to the degree of commotion and disruption. A radical change seems imminent, following a strongly adverse force necessitating delays, disappointments, rearranged plans and purposes. However, with readjustments and the indomitable energy and practical impetus of the friendly Martian forces, all may be turned into progressive channels. Personal popularity and wise social activities may be an expedient manner for bridging difficulties.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which a great deal depends on personal effort of a wise and expedient quality. There is portent of disruption and commotion, with delays and disappointments, but also prospect of sudden change, readjusted plans and projects.

A child born on this day should be energetic, skillful and forcible, as well as gracious.

The Marry-Go-Round

This Sentimental World

* * *

A temperamental woman can work up a case of "mental cruelty" against her husband if he merely glances twice at his bacon and scrapes the burnt end off his toast.

An automobile may be speedier than a horse, but it hasn't sense enough to stop and nibble grass when the driver loses his head and throws both arms 'round the girl.

* * *

No woman can understand how a man can interrupt her to ask for more roast beef when she is offering him a juicy bit of scandal.

* * *

* * *

Even in these hard-boiled days lots of women appear to suffer for love, but more often from winning the man than from losing him.

* * *

As soon as a man gets so old or so world-weary that he can't enjoy any of life's little diversions he either begins to moralize about them, to brag about his abstinence, or to try to get a law passed against them.

* * *

The test of a woman's sportsmanship is to be able to go right on LIKING a man even after he has stopped LOVING her.

* * *

* * *

This may not be a sentimental world, yet the Kingdom of Sheba is remembered chiefly because its queen had a flirtation with Solomon; ancient

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hosts of the Wedding Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me who is supposed to give the wedding reception under the following circumstances?

The bride's mother and father are dead, but she has a sister in the convent, and a married brother. His mother is also dead and he has several married brothers and sisters. His sister has offered to give the reception. Is this correct? S. K.

Under these circumstances it would be in excellent taste for the bride's brother and his wife to give the wedding reception. It is always in better taste for a member of the bride's family to give the reception.

Small But Formal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in the minister's home, and there will be only 12 people present at the ceremony. I should like very much to wear a veil but, because of the few present, I have been told that it would be improper. Do you think a hat would be more appropriate? D.

It isn't so much the fact that there are to be so few people present at your wedding that makes the difference in what you wear, but the place in which you are to be married. When a bride chooses to be married at the minister's house, it signifies that her wedding is to be informal, and therefore it would be taken for granted that she would dress informally.

Would you wish to consider being married in the church, or in a chapel of the church? In, for instance, a small chapel of the church, you could plan to have your wedding formal, even if you are to have so few guests. Then you could, correctly, wear a veil and carry out all of the details of your wedding in a formal manner. This would make your wedding a lovely "gem," small but perfectly done.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Whose Money Is It When Husband and Wife Work?

How about helping the in-laws?

There's a question that's guaranteed to start a row in any family. It has started plenty of 'em in Nita's.

Nita wants to help the dear older sister, who "always took her part"—and who's having tough breaks now. But—

So there you have the makin's of the prettiest family fracas that has hit this department in many moons.

"Dear Sally Martin—I wonder if you'll help me with an argument we're having in our family.

"I think that I should help my sister, whose husband has left her to take care of their two children all by herself. But Bob, my husband, says 'no.' And he is real peeved because I want to.

"You see, when his brother was out of work, I offered him a job with the company that I work for. He refused it, saying he would 'look around for something better,' and while he was doing that, Bob was supposed to help him . . . and I objected, because I figured he was just loafing on us. He didn't work at all for six months, but when I told Bob that I didn't want him to help him any more, and Bob said he wouldn't, why, this brother began to pick up odd jobs around, pronto, so I know that he can get work all right, if he wants to. He is only 22.

"Honestly, Sally, I feel that I ought to help my sister. I don't know what I would have ever done when I was a little girl, if it hadn't been for her. She's my older sister. I was always the 'Ugly Duckling' in our family, and my baby sister was pretty, and could get whatever she wanted by pouting and crying for it, because she looked so cute when she did it, while if I ever tried to cry for anything, all I got was a slap. When I asked for something and they said 'No,' I had to stop right there. And the rest of the kids were always making mean remarks to me, too. And this older sister always took my part. I don't know what I would ever have done without her.

"And now her husband, who drank terribly, and wasn't at all good to her, has gone off somewhere, and she's having an awfully hard time making ends meet with two babies to care for, and I think I should help her, since she did so much for me. Saved me from complete misery, in fact. And I can't see that her case and Bob's brother's case are anything alike at all. Frank is a young fellow, with no one but himself to look out for, and she has the two babies, and is not very well trained yet for work, because so young.

"And it isn't as if I wanted to use money that Bob earns. I don't. I'm working myself, and have been, ever since we've been married. Not because Bob doesn't work faithfully, but because I have a good job and like it. I've worked up from file clerk to private secretary, in three years, and I make a good salary—$45 a week.

"But even so, Bob says flatly that I have no right to send a little money to my sister, since I objected to practically supporting that brother of his. He said I had forbidden that, and that he had the same privilege. It nearly knocked me down. We had our one and only terrible argument over it. That was one month ago.

"Bob is everything to me, and this is the only thing he has ever done to hurt me. I'm earning this money myself, and I think we could easily spare a little to help sister, but not enough to help Bob's worthless and lazy brother to loaf. What do you think? Bob, since our argument, has been working every night, and sleeps in the mornings, to avoid me. I don't know what to make of him. He has never before said one word about how I spend the money I earn.

"I still think I should help Mary. She practically gave up her early life to help me obtain an education. She gave me the only love I ever knew in my family. She is now in great need. And I can't say 'No.' Is that selfish of me? Is Bob right?

You're right in thinking that your sister's case and Bob's brother's case are quite different. Your sister does need and deserve help more than he does. She is struggling with every fiber of her being to take care of her two babies, and finding it hard going, not because of laziness, but because she had had no training, and is handicapped by helpless little ones. Whereas, he is young, strong, healthy and free, and to encourage him to lean, at his present age, would do him everlasting harm . . . undermine his manhood and make a first class moocher of him. So, in your analysis of the two people, you're right, honey.

But you're mighty wrong in your attitude toward the money to be spent . . . and that, I think is the cause of your husband's hurt and anger.

You keep saying, "It's my money—why should he interfere with my use of my own money?"

But Bob might just as justly say that the money he earns is his money—that he earned it, and that, therefore, you have no right to question how he spends it.

If you're going to hold out on him, sister, he has a right to hold out on you. Marriage is nothing, unless it's 50-50. Unless you can pool your cards as well as your love, you might just as well quit the game.

It's your selfishness that is causing this trouble, Nita—not your sister's helplessness, nor Bob's brother's laziness. And unless you snap out of it, you're headed straight for trouble.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Never tamper with a cold sore or fever blister. The less it is meddled with, the more quickly will it depart. There is always danger of infection when the finger tips are passed over a cold sore.

To encourage the mouth to assume the outlines of a Cupid's bow, anoint the fingers with cold cream, place the first finger in the center of the upper lip, the thumb at the left corner, the third finger at the right corner; keep first finger stationary and draw the lip corners up to it. Repeat. Hold the lower lip stretched, and rub toward the center.

Instead of taking sleeping medicine, take a warm bath, settle down with a dull, drowsy book and clear the mind of worry. Loss of sleep does no great harm unless the sleepless one gets in a nervous fret about it. The more fretting, the farther away sleep will be.

No need of being afraid of shampooing the hair frequently if soap is rinsed away. Begin by spraying the hair with tepid water; give alternate sudsings and rinsings until the hair feels silky. Never comb or brush the glorious crown until it is thoroughly dry. Friction the scalp.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Wise Living, Secret of Longevity.

Recently, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., passed his ninety-first birthday. I was greatly impressed by the statement issued by him on this anniversary. He said "I am in the best of health and have naught but good will toward all."

DR. COPELAND

Much wisdom is portrayed in this announcement. Mr. Rockefeller owes much of his good health to the serenity of his life. Riches are not essential for this attitude. Respect of the body and the realization of its limitations as it grows older are more important.

As we increase in years, our lung power becomes less, our digestion weaker, the veins become dilated, and the skin grows dry and parchment-like. Even the throat changes, the voice becomes shrill in tone. Further, the loss of teeth and hair tell us that we cannot continue the habits of youth.

No matter what may be done in youth, when age arrives we must adhere to a schedule of temperance and regularity. It is a well known fact that most men and women who have lived to old age have followed a life of moderation.

In old age, with loss of teeth, with marked changes in the blood vessels and perhaps with digestive disturbances, it becomes almost imperative to eat less food, and to nurse the body more. Simple food which is not rich, spiced or highly flavored should be eaten. Meats should not be eaten more than two or three times a week and only at the noon meal.

Thorough and complete chewing of each mouthful is important. I would advise old people not to eat unless really hungry, to chew the food a long time and to leave the table still hungry. Drink plenty of water between meals and live in the open as much as possible. Above all else be happy and contented with life.

It is a pleasure to have our aged with us, and we should make them as comfortable as possible. Rest is essential for them, and it is as important for them, as for the infant, who sleeps most of the day.

Harsh words, unkindliness, disrespect and hard work cannot be borne by frail vessels. Such abuse is most unchristian-like. I am sorry to say I have seen examples of this.

Simple food, ample rest and kindness will make many of our older relatives and friends happy for years to come. Let us all start making someone happy today.

I love old people. They are the custodians of wisdom and everyday knowledge. Let me advise my young readers to cultivate friends among the old. Drippings of wisdom fall from their lips. They teach a wonderful philosophy. Their poise is contagious. Their advice is valuable beyond words.

Hunt up your ancient relatives. Make a crony of some good old man or saintly woman. Your life will be enriched by the contact.

BANKS HERE SUE OVER U. S. TAX

The Union Trust Company, Mellon National Bank and the Union Savings Bank of Pittsburgh yesterday filed suit jointly in Federal Court against D. B. Heiner, collector of internal revenue, to recover $794,228.72, with interest, paid in income and excess profits tax in 1921.

In the bill of complaint the banks set forth that their claim was disallowed by the commissioner of internal revenue. They had asked deductions from income on account of alleged worthless debts arising from decreased value of bonds of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

An attempt to raise the fare to eight cents failed, the bill states, and the companies were deprived of from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 additional yearly revenue. Both companies are now operating on a five-cent fare, the bill avers, and value of securities of both has dropped.

PAROLED, MUST PAY EMPLOYE

Arthur Olmstead, 60, proprietor of a restaurant at Pennsylvania and Beaver avenues, today entered upon one-year parole from Criminal Court provided he pays $549.90 to Mrs. Lottie Herbert, 50, 1246 Sheffield street, an employe whose back was injured when she fell through a trap door in the restaurant.

Olmstead had pleaded guilty before Visiting Judge William A. McConnell, of Beaver County, to having failed to comply with the state law requiring all employers to take out compensation insurance. Judge McConnell said if Olmstead fails to compensate the woman he will consider it a violation of the parole and sentence him to a $500 fine and six months in jail.

JUVENILE COURT PLANS PUSHED

Court approval of the $325,000 juvenile detention home to be built in Oakland between Fifth avenue and Forbes street, near Craft avenue, will be asked next week by the county solicitor.

The County Commissioners yesterday approved the plans for the proposed four-story building which had already been passed on by the State Welfare Department. Edgar Kaufmann, of the Juvenile Court Board, appeared before the commissioners yesterday and asked immediate action on the building.

Construction will begin shortly after the first of the year, according to Director of Public Works Norman F. Brown. The excavation and foundation work will be done this winter.

POMEROY, O., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The city of Pomeroy has been bequeathed $375,000 by Wyatt G. Plantz, millionaire banker, who died Thursday.

The money will pay off all the bonded indebtedness and other municipal debts and leave money in the treasury, city officials said.

Plantz was a prominent Pomeroy resident and interested in civic affairs which friends said they believed prompted him to leave the money to the city.

Plantz inherited a fortune from his father, George W. Plantz who published the first newspaper in Meigs County following the Civil War, and also established the first city bank.

Ball Air Mail Line May Join Merger

Representatives of both the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries and the Clifford Ball Air Lines admitted today that negotiations are pending for the merger of the Ball interests, including the Pittsburgh-Cleveland air mail line with the new transcontinental air mail route. The Pittsburgh Aviation Industries represents locally the Trans-continental and Western Air, operators of the new cross-country air mail line.

Radio Attacks On U. S. Heads Decried

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 1.—With adoption of resolutions which decried repeated attacks by radio on government officials, Teachers' Institute closed Friday. The resolution said:

"We as teachers of boys and girls who receive a certain amount of education and instruction from the radio, deplore the tendency of many of these programs to lower youthful patriotism because of frequent tirades and abuse of executive officers who from their positions are worthy of honor."

J. N. Holder was elected president; Gertrude Reitz, secretary; Floyd Eakin, treasurer.

BUSINESS AIDS FUND APPEAL

Offic'ls of many Pittsburgh business establishments are assisting the Welfare Fund by cooperating in organization of their employes for the campaign in November. The goal of this campaign is $1,520,248, which will be spent in service and assistance to many thousands of less fortunate people in this community during next year.

The following is a list of the organizations in District 2, of which George S. Ebbert is chairman: Bank of Pittsburgh, Capt. Thomas H. Eddy; Grant Building, Capt. R. A. Goetz; McClintic-Marshall Company, Capt. W. B. LaNecca, Jr.; New York Life Insurance Company, Capt. J. J. O'Neil; Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, Capt. S. C. T. Dodd.

Houston; Johnston-Morehouse-Dickey Company, Capt. C. H. Johnston.

PA. VET GIVEN DEATH PENALTY

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Paul H. Kauffman, 31, war veteran and confessed slayer of Avis Woolery, 17-year-old Webb City (Mo.) school girl, was found guilty of first-degree murder and given the death penalty by a jury in Criminal Court yesterday.

The jury was out 35 minutes.

The skeleton of the slain girl was found in a park here two weeks ago. Kauffman, in a signed confession, admitted luring the girl here and strangling her to death after having attacked her.

SOLICITORS HELD BOGUS

Several persons reported to be soliciting money for the Helping Hand Association were today branded as swindlers and impostors, by Attorney Harry I. Miller, secretary of the organization. He said:

"We have no solicitors, asking for money to help the unemployed. Such imposters should be handed over to the police. Anyone who is approached should call the nearest police station. We have taken up the matter with Supt. of Police Peter F. Walsh. We will prosecute anyone caught soliciting money for the purpose stated."

The association, which is to apply for a charter next week, Mr. Miller said, has been providing quarters for as many as 1,300 men nightly, at 439 to 449 Water street. Since October 4 last, a total of 17,000 meals have been given to the hungry. Attorney Miller says that persons from out of town will not be cared for and warns that none but Pittsburghers can be aided at this time. Funds and food have been contributed by well known business men and others. The work will be thoroughly organized, Mr. Miller says, with the granting of a charter.

RAID BREWERY, SEEK OWNER

Prohibition agents today were seeking the owner of an alleged wildcat brewery in the rear of 400 North Holland avenue, which, raided yesterday, netted the agents 2,000 gallons of beer and beer mash, they said.

Joseph Fazio, 24, of 7530 Roslyn street, Swissvale, was arrested. According to the agents he claimed to be a cousin of Philip Fazio, of Clairton, acquitted of the "barrel" murder of William Gregory, was sentenced to 15 months in the workhouse and fined $1,000 on a liquor charge in Criminal Court, yesterday.

Raiding eight places in Clearfield County, agents arrested 13 persons and seized five stills, they reported. The raids were staged in Ramey, Smith's Mills and Houtzdale.

An alleged liquor-cutting plant was uncovered by police last night when they responded to a call that a man was threatening to shoot his mother at 1807 Carson street.

Samuel Owens, 45, was arrested on complaint of his mother, Mrs. Lottie Owens, police declared. A search revealed whisky, police said. The seizure resulted in the arrest of Meyer Cohen and Abraham Owens, according to police.

POLICE QUIZ PAL OF SKIDMORE

A self-confessed pal of George Skidmore, wanted in the killing of a Mt. Washington gas station operator, is in the hands of homicide detectives today for questioning that may lead to the capture of the hunted Skidmore.

The prisoner is Roger Davis, aged 19, of 617 Buhl way. He told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court this morning that he knew Skidmore and saw him about a month ago on the rifle range of the 107th Field Artillery, near Blawnox.

As Skidmore was last seen in the vicinity of Pittsburgh September 20, detectives believe Davis may be holding back useful information. Davis claimed at the hearing this morning that he was a member of the 107th Field Artillery.

Davis was arrested last night by Mt. Washington police, who found him sitting in a parked automobile at Warrington and West Liberty avenues. He was unable to show an owner's card, saying, according to police, that he came from Canada two years ago and got the automobile by trading in a motorcycle.

Complaint to Police Results in Dry Raid

Robert Medford, 25, of 21 McGanby street, who reported to North Side police that he had been beaten in a house at 222 Anderson street, was arrested with two others when police visited the place and confiscated, they said, a quantity of liquor. The others said they were Fred Snyder, 50, of 816 Western avenue, and Frank Renshaw, 24, who said he had no home. They were charged with visiting a disorderly house.

Fire Razes Lumber Mill at Ridgway

RIDGWAY, Pa., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The J. R. Isaacson, lumber mill, a one-story frame structure in which thousands of feet of lumber were stored, was destroyed by fire late last night. Loss was tentatively placed at $50,000. Origin of the fire was undetermined.

FREE WANT ADS AID JOBLESS

Seeking to relieve the present unemployment situation, the Sun-Telegraph has thrown open its want ad columns to the home-owners of Pittsburgh and other more fortunate individuals who will be given an opportunity to aid those out of work and at the same time see many odd tasks accomplished.

If Sun-Telegraph readers need their walks repaired, roofs, spoutings or porches fixed, plumbing renovated or repaired, coal put in or gardens and flower-beds made ready for the winter, wall paper cleaned, windows washed, or wish their car washed and polished at home, they can give aid to the unemployed by notifying this newspaper.

If you can offer work of any kind to any one, whether for a day, week or indefinitely, and the job pays a salary or wage, call Grant 5400 or stop at Want Ad Corner, Fifth Avenue and Market Street, and the Sun-Telegraph will run a "Help Wanted" ad free of charge.

Any job which you thought you might do for yourself, but for which you never found time, will give a less fortunate individual a chance of employment.

Legal Notices 107

IN the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania.
In re petition of James Clark, Jr., to clear title of land purchased at tax sale. No. 1390, January Term, 1921.
NOTICE.

To Owen F. McMahon and all other persons generally, who have or claim to have any right, title or interest in or claim against the hereinafter described property, which has hereby been levied upon: Take notice, that on October 31st, 1930, the petition of James Clark, Jr., was presented in the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, Pa., at No. 1390, January Term, 1921, by which it is set forth that the said James Clark, Jr., is the owner of all that certain lot in the Fifteenth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, being Lot No. 144 in the Plan of the Beechview Improvement Co., Ltd., called Kishon, recorded in Plan Book Vol. 17, pages 18, etc., said lot fronting 25 feet on the northerly side of Westover street, and extending of that width northwardly 90 feet; that said lot was conveyed to him by Robert H. Braun, Sheriff, as the property of Owen F. McMahon, at a tax sale held on the 3rd day of March, 1930, for the taxes levied upon the said property for the year 1920 by the School District of the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., and said lot was sold on a writ of levari facias as No. 1390, January Term, 1921, for the sum of $2.00. That said deed was dated September 24, 1927, and recorded in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny County in Deed Book Vol. 3551, page 337, and that the time for redemption of said lot has passed. Wherefore, the Court has made an order granting a rule on Owen F. McMahon, and all other persons generally who have or claim any right, title or interest in or claim against said lot, to appear within 60 days from publication of this notice and show cause why the title of the petitioner to said land should not be adjudicated and decreed valid and indefeasible as against all rights or claims whatsoever. This rule to be returnable the first Monday of January, 1931.

WALTER F. CAMPBELL,

DAILY TRUE STORY

Sweet Cider

Lee was conceded to be the "up-and-comingest" of the five Burgess girls.

Her name was Lenora, but as she had a sister Nora, they had to shorten her name to "Lee."

The Burgesses weren't wealthy, by any means. Old man Burgess had what he called a "tolerable good farm" and they got along all right, but it was Lee who seemed to have all of the ambition.

Everyone said that either Clark or Ferd Wentworth would eventually marry Lee.

Later, everyone added that perhaps Chet Andrews might have a chance, a possible chance, to win the hand of the handsome and "up-and-coming" Lee Burgess.

This was because Chet had developed into a good-looking young man. He was 20, then, only a year older than Lee, and considered by his two so-called half-brothers, Clark and Ferd Wentworth, to be just a kid.

Lee often went to the city in the Burgess juggernaut—a car of the 1918 vintage—with various things to sell, such as chestnuts in the fall, berries in the summer, very early vegetables in the spring, and so on.

Ambitious Girl

Lee was ambitious for an education and she had figured it out that there was nothing to prevent her from having a three-year course at the Misses Ryan's school in the city—a really noted school for girls with ambitions to be something other than single flappers and ultimately married parasites—just so long as she earned the tuition money herself.

When Chet got to be 20, Lee took notice that he wasn't dark as to complexion and hair and serious as to expression, like Clark and Ferd Wentworth. His hair was wavy and his complexion good. Dressed up he would look quite stunning.

It didn't please Clark and Ferd any to see Chet running around occasionly with Lee.

But it got so that Chet seemed to be a serious rival.

Finally, both Clark and Fred agreed to put it right up to Lee. Clark brought it up first.

Lee gave no more information and Ferd confided to Clark that, amazing as it seemed, Lee actually couldn't decide among the three of them—she was actually silly enough to consider Chet along with them.

Just before Lee went away to school, having cleverly earned the necessary amount for tuition and maintenance, Chet had a talk with her.

Leaves for School

"I'd like to ask if you promised to marry Clark or Fred? No need for me to get all set on winning you if you've decided."

"I haven't decided."

"No, Chet."

"I'll expect to marry you then."

"Who knows?"

So that, as someone so aptly put it, was that.

Lee went off to school.

Chet's mother had been Wentworth's second wife. The mother of Clark and Ferd had died long before that. Then Wentworth married the widow Andrews and her boy, Chet, had been taken into the family. In reality he wasn't even a half-brother to Clark and Ferd Wentworth.

Lee had been away to school only a short while when Mr. Wentworth died.

While he had never been very fond of Chet, he had tolerated him, and perhaps he felt he owed it to do something for him, so in his will he left Chet the old Luther place.

The big and valuable Wentworth farm went to Clark and Ferd.

Most people were inclined to laugh at Chet's legacy. There were about 60 acres of land, the buildings were old, the tillable acreage small. The large but poorly kept apple orchards were a small source of income. Wentworth had foreclosed on the old farm only a couple years before and had never got around to restore it to a paying property.

When Lee came home for vacation she condoled Clark and Fred on the loss of their father, and asked how Chet was making out. She had heard of his questionable legacy.

Both Clark and Fred proposed again, but Lee wasn't sure.

Poor Chet didn't propose.

Lee drove out to the old Luther farm and saw Chet. He had built a roadside stand and sold a little bottled soda, a few weenies and such stuff.

Lee was jolly with him and never let on that it distressed her to see him doing this.

When the apple season came, Chet sold some of the most marketable of the apples and had the others made into sweet cider.

Next summer, when Lee came home for a vacation, both Clark and Fred had sport cars to take her about in.

Chet, to Lee's surprise, had had the old buildings painted, a new roof and verandas put on, and a more striking roadside stand built.

Lee progressed wonderfully well in this school, even to securing a degree. She sent invitations to Clark, Fred and Chet.

Attends Graduation

Clark and Fred wrote that they couldn't leave their farm as they had many hired men and were making a great deal of money.

Chet arrived at the graduation. He was driving a new and expensive car. He appeared for the evening dance in the proper evening attire. Lee had never seen him like that before.

Instead of coming home by train, Chet drove her the 200 miles in his car, going about 10 miles out of his way to take her past the old Luther place, now known as the Andrews place.

Most of the buildings were new. Handsome grounds about them. The roadside stand torn down.

Chet had bought two adjoining farms, so his property was now even larger than the Wentworth farm—and more valuable.

"Tell me how you ever were able to do that by selling sweet cider," Lee begged.

"If I told, you wouldn't marry me, Lee," he objected.

"And I certainly won't marry you if you don't tell, so you've got a faint chance the other way and none by keeping your secret."

"Well, I'm all through with it now. I've got enough money saved up, but the truth is, I didn't sell much sweet cider."

"Why, Chet, my father says you bought as many as five thousand glass jugs for the sweet cider in one lot."

"Yes, but I didn't sell much sweet cider—only to strangers. To those I knew I didn't have sweet cider in the jugs—I had applejack!"

"Applejack—right in the open club?"

Lee stared at him.

"You clever boy!" Lee cried, and added, "Kiss me, Chet."

Chet kissed her. He still has this habit, although they've been married several years now.

GEORGE BUNGLE, WHY DIDN'T YOU GET HOME FOR DINNER? YOU LOOK UTTERLY FAGGED-OUT. DON'T TELL ME YOU SPENT FROM EIGHT O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING UNTIL TEN AT NIGHT WAITING FOR PONTOON'S TRAIN.
HE ARRIVED ABOUT SIX. I SPENT THE TIME SINCE THEN TALKING HIM OUT OF THE NOTION OF COMING HERE, AND I KNOW—I'M POSITIVE, HE SMELLED A MOUSE.
OH WHO CARES ANYTHING ABOUT A MAN WHO HAS THE NERVE TO SEND US A TELEGRAM SAYING HE OBJECTS TO MONTGOMERY? SUCH NERVE. WHO CARES? WHO?
IT'S A BIG LONG STORY ABOUT WHY PONTOON DISLIKES MONTGOMERY. IT SEEMS THAT IN THE FALL OF 1920—
WHAT HAS THE FALL OF 1920 GOT TO DO WITH THAT MAN TRYING TO GIVE US THE IMPRESSION WE COULDN'T EVEN SNEEZE WITHOUT A WRITTEN ORDER TO DO SO FROM HIM? WHO IS HE?
LISTEN, IN THE FALL OF 1920 PONTOON WIRED WALL STREET FOR A LOAN. THEY, IN EFFECT, SENT HIM A POST CARD TELLING HIM TO SEE MONTGOMERY. WELL TO MAKE A LONG STORY SHORT—
OH GEORGE BUNGLE, I KNEW THE MOMENT YOU WALKED IN HERE THAT PONTOON HAD STUFFED YOU RIGHT UP TO THE EYES WITH A WINDY STORY, WHICH PROVES ONLY THAT A MAN WITH ONE MILLION DOLLARS AND TWO MILLION HEIRS JUST CAN'T BE WRONG.
LISTEN JO LET'S BE CALM. LET'S— MY WORD, I JUST REMEMBER.. I HAVEN'T HAD ANYTHING TO EAT ALL DAY.

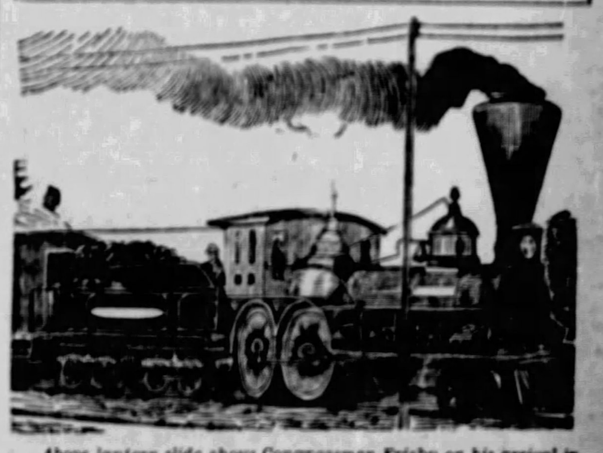
WITH FRISBY IN DARKEST AFRICA!



Above lantern slide shows Congressman Frisby on his arrival in the heart of Africa. Unfortunately the train hides the view of the large reception committee of prominent Africans, which met the train and welcomed him as America's unofficial Ambassador, to which Mr. Frisby fittingly responded by tooting the whistle. The ceremony was broadcast over the African network.

By HORACE WALPOLE FRISBY

The Nonpareil

OUR journey from Lambalampfa to Bangwoolo, by way of Kambakumba and Elmira, was necessarily delayed. Traveling by train, it was necessary to lay our own tracks. It was impossible to carry more than a hundred yards of track, and after we had traversed this distance it was necessary to back up and tear up the tracks in order to advance them. We had to jack up the engine which became a heartbreaking task because we had no jack.

However, Africa is no place to whine or complain, as I told the natives when they began to pout. I soon found it necessary to organize committees and hold pep rallies, and if I had had more pep I believe I could have gone a long way toward civilising these childlike people who took such keen enjoyment in the paper hats and noisemakers which I thoughtfully provided. Soon they accepted me as one of them and called me "Egbu Man," a title which is only bestowed upon forceful men who have personality and receding chins. I permitted the native women to tattoo me profusely, and dye my toupee royal purple. The human tongue is too feeble to express what I suffered at times—and I doubt that I would be here to tell the tale had I not evidenced the endurance of a camel and the courage of a lion. Born on the plains, of genuine Scotch-American stock (my grandfather was a Bourbon) I make no claim to royal ancestry, but I do claim (and if I am mistaken I hope someone will correct me) that there is one thought I would like to leave you—

All Ready for Election

Your Vote May Be Important.

Study of the vote cast in primary and general elections in Pennsylvania since Gifford Pinchot first ran for Governor suggests that the election next Tuesday will be close. The partisans both of Pinchot and John M. Hemphill can find comfort in the figures. For example, when Pinchot ran against John A. McSparran, the Democratic candidate, in 1922, he won by 250,071 majority. Philadelphia gave him a majority that year of 180,021, however, and since it is conceded that he will lose Philadelphia this year the figures look encouraging for Hemphill—that is, until thought is given to the fact that McSparran is now out for Pinchot and is likely to carry along with him not a few of the 581,625 votes that he received in 1922.

The American Legion has a provision in its constitution forbidding the participation of the organization in partisan politics. The dissension that has been created in the legion by the action of two officials who, in violation of the constitution, telegraphed post commanders, asking them to urge the members to vote for Hemphill, proves the wisdom of the ban.

The voting machine puzzle comes to the fore again with news from various counties about preparations for using the devices next Tuesday. Lackawanna County, containing Scranton, Pennsylvania's third largest city, will be completely supplied. It seems strange that some counties should get voting machines without trouble, while every imaginable obstacle is placed in the way of introducing them in other counties.

Pennsylvania hunters are none too eager, it seems, to kill female deer. There is apparently a strong feeling that it is unsportsmanlike. At any rate, notwithstanding advertising of the fact that a certain number of licenses would be issued for the killing of does, the applications for the privilege have not come in very rapidly, and the Game Commission announces that 38,520 such licenses are still available.

The Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania reports that 80 per cent of the $10,000,000 appropriated by the 1929 Legislature for the construction of state welfare institution buildings has been spent and contracts awarded for the expenditure of the balance. Notwithstanding these expenditures, an investigation made by the Sun-Telegraph disclosed that some of the institutions were still in desperate need of new buildings. The Public Charities Association proposes, very pertinently, that the 1931 Legislature be asked to appropriate another $10,000,000 for the continuance of the welfare building program. Certainly the commonwealth should make some provision to relieve the congestion in insane asylums in which patients are sleeping in corridors and in double-deck beds.

Pittsburgh milk dealers announce they will reduce retail milk prices in November "as a contribution toward relief of consumers in the current depression." Commodity prices in the stores are at the lowest level since 1913. The West Penn Railways Company has reduced the trolley fare to five cents on some of its lines. What a pity that the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, charging 25 cents for a 10-cent bus ride, is not equally responsive to the need of the times.

Well, who would have thought it? Judge Joseph Buffington, it develops, is not only dean of Federal Court jurists but has served longer than any other federal judge in the nation's history. The fact came to light when the belief was expressed in a Philadelphia newspaper the other day that the last of the 306 delegates to the Republican National Convention of 1880 who for 36 ballots voted to give Gen. Grant a third term as President had died. Judge Buffington, one of the 306, wrote to deny that he had been "bumped off." It will surprise many to know that the jurist, with his ever youthful spirit, has been on the bench 38 years, or four more than Chief Justice John Marshall.

KDKA, pioneer broadcasting station of the world, will celebrate radio's tenth anniversary tomorrow. Was there ever before an industry with so phenomenal a rise? When KDKA broadcast the Harding-Cox election returns in 1920, they were heard by only a few hundred persons with crystal sets. Now there are 13,500,000 radio receivers in the United States. Birthday congratulations to KDKA!

Right on the heels of the report that Amish farmers are leaving Pennsylvania comes the news that another interesting "Pennsylvania Dutch" religious sect is in a bad way. Suit has been brought for revocation of the charter of the German Seventh-Day Baptists, a branch of the Dunkers. At a hearing it was testified the society now has only 17 members. It was founded in 1728 by John Conrad Beissel, who established a celibate community for the members at Ephrata, Pa. For sentimental reasons, if for no other, it is regrettable to observe the passing of these peculiar religious sects which played so prominent a part in the early history of Pennsylvania. Practically without exception the principles on which they were founded called for the highest morality in their members.

Some of the cities which support their own symphony orchestras are not having an easy time this year raising funds for their maintenance. Pittsburgh is fortunate, perhaps, in not being confronted with such a problem at this time, while at the same time being assured of at least a few symphony concerts to be given by our less pretentious orchestra, recruited from musicians who fill other positions between concerts. The local season opens November 9, with Eugene Goosens as guest conductor.

The Bureau of Motor Vehicles reports that it has received so far this year 8,337 bad checks. Why in the world would so many people try to impose on the state, especially when, even if they escape criminal prosecution for the fraud, they are required to pay a $5 forfeit for the trouble they have caused? The answer probably is that they expected that when the checks came back to their banks they would have enough funds on deposit to cover them. That more than 8,000 have failed to have sufficient funds in bank, even though the amount required to cover the check was in numerous cases not more than $10, is a serious reflection on the financial methods of a multitude of people.

A woman suing in the local courts for divorce testified her husband threatened to disfigure her so horribly that "nobody would look at me but my mother." What a tribute that is to mother love—the recognition that no matter how hideous the disfigurement might be, the mother would not shrink!

The elephant is balancing
Upon the plank and bends
It up or down accordingly
As he leans toward the ends.

Hard toward the wet, light toward the dry—
That plank can't touch the latter—
To keep from falling 'twixt the two
Is not an easy matter.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Lul'aby

In twilight skies
The first stars rise
And on the ear
Falls, silver clear,
Cicadas' sweet refrain.

Now to their tune,
Their wistful croon,
Sleep, baby on my breast;
Drink draughts of sleep,
Sweet draughts and deep,
Taste joys of perfect rest.

Drift down calm seas
Of dreamful ease
While love its watch will keep,
Till the dawn breaks,
Till robin wakes

SCIENCE'S PART IN MASS CULTURE

By Archibald Henderson

The great handicaps of education are expense and restriction. Education, for all its efforts, can affect only a moderate percentage of the population. The higher the forms of education, the fewer the recipients of its benefits. Our higher institutions are already beginning to reach, or, in some cases, have actually reached the saturation point. The expense of buildings, dormitories, laboratories, dining halls, clubs, is colossal; and growing by leaps and bounds. A dormitory to house 100 students costs $400,000. A library building costs from one to ten million dollars. The price of the contents of a library cannot be computed in dollars and cents.

The people, in vast numbers, cannot go to the universities. There are not nearly enough colleges and universities to go around. If the American people were to stage, overnight, an educational revolution, and demand higher education for every person, it could not succeed. The existing institutions would supply not more than a few per cent; not even as high as 10 per cent of the requisite facilities.

The vast problems of mass entertainment, mass information, and mass education are distinctively in the hands of scientists and of capitalists, not in the hands of educators. There is no limit to the amount of information, entertainment and education the great public can and will absorb. The public interest has no saturation point; its power of absorption is, for practical purposes, illimitable.

Science, in conjunction with capital, is making rapid strides, in the effort to fill the insatiable maw of the public, endlessly avid for entertainment, news and instruction. Forty years ago in every cultured home was a funny little device, the stereopticon, with two pieces of glass, one for each eye; and about a foot away was a frame into which could be inserted a double picture of a scene. By looking through the two squares of glass, one observed—with delight!—an only slightly magnified picture, far from realistic, of St. Peter's in Rome, of a snow storm, of the Grand Canyon of Colorado. At night, the "magic lantern" was brought out; and mildly interesting pictures were projected on a screen, furnishing harmless amusement for the children and even for the grown-ups.

Science today has made all that seem only elementary, innocent and juvenile. The daily press has become the mighty engine of news and information distribution, extending the powers of the more or less static library a million, many millions fold. Mass entertainment and mass information, on an unprecedented scale, are now afforded by the phonograph and the radio.

Electricity and invention are bringing the lecturer, the educator, the artist to the public. When the broadcaster speaks into the microphone and addresses all those "within the sound of my voice," he is addressing not hundreds, not thousands only: he may, conceivably, be addressing the great majority of the civilized world!

The films were still-born; silence reigned in the film palace, save for the sounds of a possible orchestra. The captions were inscribed on the films, enabling the spectator to follow the story with the aid of these captions. Today talking films have brought new life into the more than 22,000 motions pictures of the country.

To 10,000,000 homes radio carries a rich program of entertainment and instruction. Television is still in the laboratory stage, so far as mass production is concerned. It is only a matter of time when we may have a theater in our own home, be it only a small cabinet in a corner of the living room. There we shall behold the latest drama, the latest football game, the current pageant, as it is being enacted. Science is now, and will increasingly become, the greatest of all instruments of mass education and mass entertainment.

LISTEN, WORLD -:-

By Elsie Robinson

For the last week I have been sittin' at the bedside of an old lady of eighty-five. She did not know that I was sitting there, although forty-seven years ago she gave me life. But my face, and all other living faces, had ceased to interest her. She was too busy with other matters to think about us.

"Terribly sick . . . pneumonia . . . there's hardly a chance," said the doctors and nurses, bending above her, counting the slipping pulse, waiting tensely for the crisis. But there was no tension about the little figure, lying there so calmly—no fighting or fear. Rather, there was a strange, triumphant composure and an almost amused contempt! It was as if she surveyed us, not from a sickbed, but from the high vantage of those long, lively years.

She had seen so much, felt so much in those 85 years. She had made them so thoroughly hers—taking all they had to offer, with a fine disdain for price. Pain, loneliness, risk, inconvenience, poverty, hardship—these conditions, which loom so large to us today and which we escape at any cost, had been mere incidents to her. One accepted such things with proper indifference in her day. They were inevitable, but non-essential. The important thing was life.

And now, dying, the important thing still was life. What did it matter whether she died today or tomorrow, as long as she had lived? Back from their wandering came the fierce, old blue eyes . . . acknowledging our faces, laughing at our fear. No pretense in that laugh . . . genuine amusement at our callow cowardice. How soft we were, we moderns . . . how ignorant and poorly bred, that we should fear death . . . that we should think death greatly mattered.

For fear was a child's trick. Her breed did not fear. They knew that only life mattered. Life—that was the great thing. To live life fully — regardless of such trivial interruptions as pain. To be so alive that one could face even death triumphantly — that was the great thing. That was the test.

Living, not dying—that was the test. Death? Any fool could die. Every one has to die. There was nothing distinguished about dying. But there was something distinguished about living—really living.

And she had lived! In spite of everything, she had lived! Lying, frail as a shell on her piled pillows, her dying eyes laughed and challenged our living ones.

They passed us by lightly—was there pity in that lightness?—and slowly turned, as if facing another circle. What did she face? What lay behind that deeper recognition—that prouder challenge that ran like a flame through the transparent flesh? Did she see Them, then — those Others of her race who had already run the gauntlet, who now stood watching, invisible, while she made the crossing?

I do not know. She did not say. But for a night it was like that. For a night the life in her stood ablaze and defiant, contemptuous of slipping pulse and failing breath—FOR A NIGHT SHE ASSERTED LIFE! Then suddenly with the morning she slept—and woke to live!

For life, she had always insisted, was the important thing—the only real thing.

Isn't It So?

The work we hate to do is the work we have to do.

There seems to be about forty years difference in being young and youngish.

Unfortunately, the man who acts on the theory that it is better to give than to receive is apt to go into the hands of a receiver.

The people who are always talking about what they have done are almost as tiresome as the people who are always talking about what they are going to do.

Text For Today — God is a spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth.—John iv:24.

When You Build a House

You Build PROSPERITY.

EXCAVATOR | MASON

All right-minded men and women want to own their own homes. Nowhere else does life attain its fullest and most satisfactory development. Nowhere else can children be brought up amid the influences which make them good and useful citizens. Fortunate, indeed, is the family that lives under its own roof-tree, amid pleasant surroundings and congenial neighbors. Humble though such a home may be, it gives its possessors all the essentials of happiness.

Today you hear much of the business depression, so-called, yet for many families who have SAVED money in recent years, the depression is their first opportunity to own a home. Houses already built are cheaper, while if you contemplate building for yourself, the price of labor and material is far below the scale of a year ago. Today your dollar is worth nearly twice what it was in October, 1929. The power of your money, if you have any, is almost doubled.

Building now, also, you help not only yourself but many others. Masons, carpenters, painters, plumbers—these little sketches show you a few. And bear in mind that when you build a house, you build PROSPERITY, since those whom you pay to build it are consumers, spending their money for goods that others—perhaps you—produce.

New construction, or needed repairs and improvements in homes already built, cost less now than they have for years. Those who can afford to build or repair now are assured of bargains. They can also help to lift the cloud from industry.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Ten years ago I used to wonder why people had to get away from New York every now and then and check up with themselves. But not any more. Just a few minutes ago, answering a door buzz, a gentleman inquired: 'Does Mr. Willard Gilmore live here?''

I replied he didn't and eyeing me coldly the visitor said: "He must." And he was so convincing I ran through the house asking my wife, mother-in-law and cook if he really did. I even peeked in a clothes closet we never use in the rear. The visitor finally departed, shaking his head.

No sooner had I hunched up over the typewriter than the phone rang and the girl announced: "Mr. Willard Gilmore calling!" So I dashed to my wife wringing my hands and moaning: "He does live here and we have moved into the wrong apartment." Right then instead of the buzz there was a loud knock.

I opened the door and cried: "It is all right, Mr. Gilmore, we are packing." "But it wasn't Mr. Gilmore at all it was a man to take down the awnings. The why, where and whence of Mr. Gilmore is still a deep mystery, but the fun of the day had just begun. Draw up a chair!

The awning taker-away would select the one at the window right back of my desk to remove first. He finally got it loose and asked me if I would mind holding to it while he went for a tool. He must have gone for it by the way of Bridgeport. Fifteen minutes later I was still holding on, pale and growing twittery.

Had he not arrived when he did I would have had to let go or followed the whole shooting match to the pavement six floors below. And I don't follow awnings gracefully. I asked him to hurry. "Go right on banging the typewriter," he replied. "You won't bother me." That's the kind he was.

Well, sir, for an hour with chill winds through an open window playing tag up and down my spine he fiddled with that awning. He folded, unfolded and refolded it, counted the parts and at last announced: "There is a bolt missing." But I was too played out obviously to remark there would soon be a nut missing, too.

* * *

And if there is a young man in New York just embarking on a salesmanship career who hasn't picked on me as prospect No. 1 to try out his sales talk I'm just a high strung imaginative nit-wit. And don't pay any attention. One thing of which I'm sure. If I visit a restaurant and there is a girl just starting in the waiting business I draw her. You can't talk me out of that.

* * *

Last evening I barged into one of those tea rooms which strives to fulfill the hackneyed description cozy. I was in a gastronomical glow for two plain lamb chops, a baked potato avec outer hide and a salad of lettuce and tomato. In such moods I confess to a certain testiness—an old family trait. In Scotland today there is a saying: "Never deny a McIntyre a baked potato avec outer hide." They all remember my great-great-grand-uncle McTavish. There was a baked potato-avec-outer-hide man! Anyway, a pleasing and prettily dimpled lady took my order. But when it came there was a potato startlingly nude and without its outer hide. One of the old McIntyre rages overcame me. The lady's eyes brimmed. "I'm new here and you are the first person I've waited on," she murmured. So I ate what she brought and tripled the tip. In such a charitable glow I said to the proprietor going out: "A wonderful waitress, that girl who served me." He beamed appreciation and replied: "One of the best. Been with us eight years."

* * *

Then—and O, the pity of it!—there is that riotous riveting at the new Waldorf across the way. I'm still mad at them. The higher they go the noisier the din. And they have 22 more stories to go. Twice I've rushed to the window to shake my fist at the sky. I'd even be nastier than that but you never can tell what those big, rough steel workers might do to a simpleton in spats.

* * *

Don Dickerman hasn't added gaiety to the last 48 hours either if he cares to know. Three messages to phone him at three different numbers resulted in getting a Chinese laundry, a crutch factory in Astoria and a needle work guild in the Bronx. It may be just banter, but I'm up in my Fall bantering.

Floyd Gibbons says if he stays in New York too long he talks to himself along the street. I'm further along than that. I make gestures.
